put a scare on their nationally-ranked Pac-10 opponents. Three different players scored last weekend as Washington tied with No. 7 UCLA and lost a 2-1 heartbreaker to Southern California.

Oregon has also been getting big minutes from another Washington native, forward Allyssa White. The junior from Bainbridge Island has been a spark-plug off the bench, with three points. "She's a real good athlete," fourth-year head coach Bill Steffen said. "Her quickness pressures other teams into mistakes, and they turn the ball over, which is a good thing."

To realistically be in a position to qualify as a bubble team for the NCAA tournament, Oregon needs to win the rest of its games, including contests with USC and UCLA next weekend.

Oregon goalkeeper Amanda Fox said the Ducks should worry less about scoring large quantities of goals and concentrate more on getting wins this weekend. "One of the best things about soccer is that it's a 90-minute game," said Fox, who has three shutouts this season, including the Ducks 4-0 drubbing of Oregon State last week. "Making the tournament has nothing to do with goals but rather with wins."

Tyson's opponent finally get his shot

LAS VEGAS — Orlin Norris finally is getting a fight he wanted a decade ago.

"I felt like I could beat him 10 years ago," said Norris, who will fight Mike Tyson on Saturday night. "Nothing has changed."

Norris' attitude might remain the same, but a lot has changed in 10 years for the two fighters, especially for Tyson.

In 1989, Tyson was the fearsome undisputed heavyweight champion. Now he is 33 and making yet another comeback. He is a fighter who maintains the power of his glory years, but whose fast hands and quick feet have been slowed by time and inactivity.

Tyson, however, remains an attraction, a man held in the harsh glare of a celebrity built on his boxing achievement and his out-of-ring problems.

"People love Mike Tyson," said Dan Goossen, president of promoter America Presents. "They love to see him win. They love to see him lose." "He has done so much for the game, and I think he deserves a lot of the attention he gets," said the 34-year-old Norris.

Tyson was a 12-1 favorite to win the 10-round match in the MGM Grand Garden.

A decade ago the odds against Norris would have been similar to the 42-1 odds that favored Tyson against James "Buster" Douglas on Feb. 11, 1990.

Douglas, who knocked out Tyson in the 10th round in perhaps boxing's greatest upset, was the first choice for this bout. Tyson is fighting for the first time since he knocked out Francois Botha on Jan. 16 and served 3 1-2 months in a Maryland jail for assaulting two motorists after a minor accident.

Douglas, however, was rejected because of his poor physical condition. The attraction of Douglas to the people who guide and sell Tyson's career was his chin, which had grown increasingly fragile.

"Timing wise, it's still not there yet," Tobbagi said. "It's going to take a little bit of time to get back, because being off two weeks, it's a long time."

Besides the emotional impact of Tobbagi's return, her role should be crucial in both matches. The outside hitter led Oregon with 13 kills and 11 digs against Washington State on Sept. 23 and had a career-high 20 kills versus Washington the next day.

The Cougars are fresh off of a hard fought five-game Civil War comeback over Washington last Saturday, led by LaToya Harris' career-high 22 kills, 25 digs and 7 blocks.

Five players scored in double digits against the Huskies as Washington State setter Melissa Wright had 80 assists, five short of the school record.

The Ducks' loss to Washington State could be misleading. Oregon struggled at the start of matches early this season, which showed in the first game's score of 15-4. Games two and three were much closer, as the Cougars edged the Ducks 15-12 and 15-10.

While Washington State has some momentum, Washington does not. The Huskies have lost their last five matches and are tied for ninth place in the Pac-10.

Against the Huskies, Oregon won game one before dropping the next three to lose the match. The Ducks came close to winning game two of that match, but crumbled in the final minutes, losing 15-11.

Washington's Kristina Laffling had a big game against the Cougars, finishing with 25 kills, 23 digs and nine blocks. Oregon did a good job of containing Laffling earlier this season, holding her to a .130 attack percentage with 15 kills and nine errors.

Lisa Underhill could pose a major problem. She burned Oregon for 22 kills while committing just five errors.
