HAND it to him

Silky smooth senior flanker Tony Hartley is on the cusp of several all-time Oregon records

By Mirjam Swanson

Expect Tony Hartley to break a record Saturday.

Don't be surprised if he breaks two. And, between now and the season's end, there's a third that he also considers within his grasp.

When the silky smooth receiver takes the field Saturday, he'll do so needing only 33 quick yards to top Cristin McLemore's career mark of 2,498 receiving yards, first all-time at Oregon.

He needs two touchdown catches to equal McLemore's first-place total of 24.

And 24 receptions will give him more catches than any other Ducks receiver ever.

He wants it all.

"I'd like to be the all-time receiver here," Hartley said. "I think about the records all the time. They're very important."

So pay close attention, because he's going to do it his way.

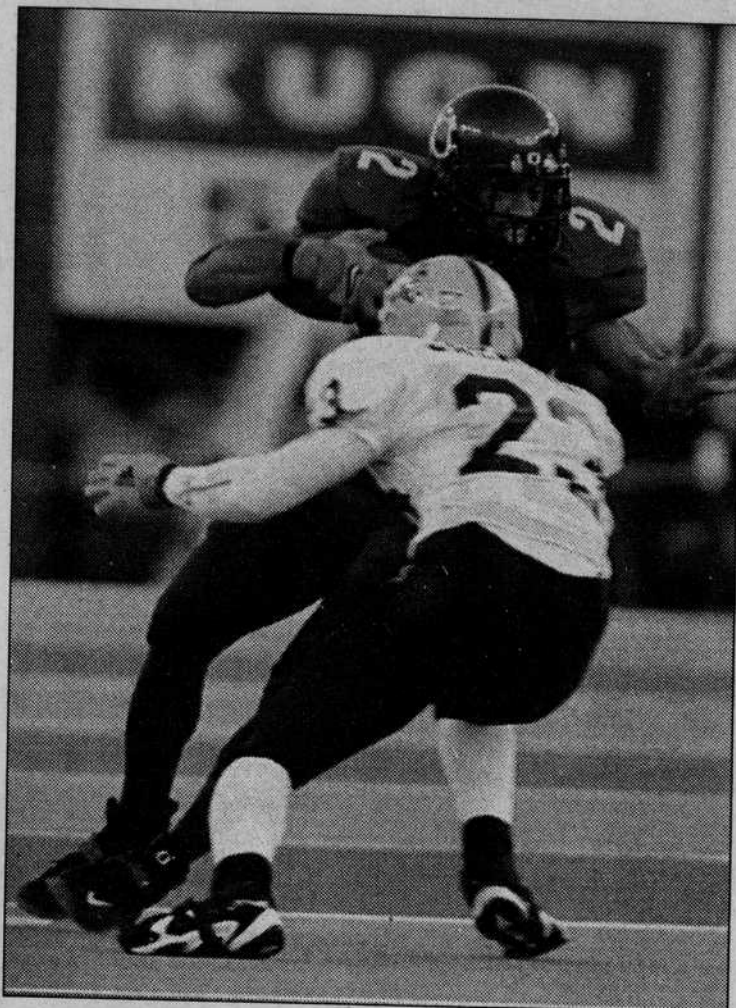

As calmly and coolly as possible. Quietly.

"There's no question that Tony gets overlooked," Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti said. "It's amazing because you look back and you think, 'In what game did he get all his yardage?' He just accumulates it, and he does it in a workman-like manner."

That, Hartley insists, is by design.

"I'm a laid-back guy," he said.

"I'm gonna go out there and play hard and make my plays, but for the most part, I'm gonna stay quiet. I would say I'm probably like a silent assassin."

Hartley is really as consistent as they come. Just check out the stats.

He's caught passes in 22 straight games. He has six 100-yard games. His last 20 receptions have been for
