Tony Hartley moved into first on Oregon's all-time receiving-yardage list Saturday.

game," Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti said. "Dietrich Moore played his tail off."

Indeed, Oregon's plan was to jump on the hapless Cougars early and then keep the pressure on from there.

The plan worked. Washington State took advantage of some short-lived Oregon hospitality with a first-quarter field goal, but from there the Cougars were simply overmatched and outplayed.

The Ducks' offense, manned almost exclusively by sophomore quarterback Joey Harrington in his first collegiate start, rolled over the Cougars and had a great time doing it.

"We wanted to come out and get on them early, and we did," said Tony Hartley, who checked back into the game late in the fourth quarter to break Cristin McLemore's all-time school record for most career receiving yards. Hartley now has 2,505 receiving yards, nine more than McLemore.

"I wanted to do it when the game was on the line," Hartley said, "but at the same time it feels good to have 44,000 people congratulate you for what you've done."

The Ducks operated effectively, in line with their usual offensive blueprint. The running game — which uncharacteristically consisted of more than just tailback Reuben Droughns — created opportunity for Harrington to throw.

By all means, Droughns was still a big part of the scheme, rushing for 123 yards and one touchdown on 23 carries. But he was happy to get help.

Tailback-turned-fullback (at least for the night) Derien Latimer was tremendous. The senior from Colorado scored Oregon's initial points in the first quarter, pulling in his first collegiate touchdown reception on a 28-yard catch.

Latimer scored again on a 35-yard rush in the second quarter and finished the game with three carries and one catch for 83 all-purpose yards.

"[Washington State] didn't know what to expect," Droughns said. "They're seeing this former tailback at fullback, and they're like, 'He can run the ball.' That took a lot of pressure off of me."

Sophomore tailback Herman Ho-Ching was also productive in his first appearance since injuring his foot against Southern California on Sept. 25. He had 11 carries for 41 yards in addition to one reception for 13 yards.

Harrington played with his usual enthusiasm and poise during his first career start, finishing 15 of 24 for 239 yards and three touchdowns. He also scrambled twice for eight yards, including a touchdown on a perfectly executed bootleg.

Sports Briefs

Wrestlers win opener

Oregon wrestling got off to an impressive start Friday with wins in California against California-Davis and Stanford.

First, the Ducks jumped out to an 18-3 lead over the Aggies in cruising to a 24-11 victory.

Oregon then caused the Cardinal similar frustrations. Stanford lost all chance at a comeback in its 22-16 loss when Oregon's Doug Lee slammed Stanford's Chuck Fairbanks and recorded a technical fall with the Ducks leading 17-13.

The sweep leaves Oregon perfect so far at 2-0 in the Pacific-10 Conference and overall.

Men's tennis team successful in the first round

The Oregon men's tennis team enjoyed four wins during the first day of action Saturday at the ITA Regionals in Seattle.

Freshmen Oded Teig and Leslie Esinga, junior David Becker and senior Joaquin Hamdanall won their opening-round matches.

Teig, Hamdan and Becker all won in straight sets, while Esinga won in three sets. Teig beat Benny Anderson of Sacramento State, Hamdan beat St. Mary's Arturo Tanall and Becker triumphed over Fresno State's Nick Fustar.

Esinga won his three-set match with Sacramento State's Chris Smith.

The three other Ducks competing were senior Cedric Vanhaver, sophomore T.J. Cameron and Jason Menke. All three suffered first-round losses.

Vanhaver and Cameron lost in straight sets, and Menke went down in three.

Sunday results were not available at press time. The tournament runs through Tuesday.

Want to build great software?

We're looking for a few more University of Oregon graduates like Chad Busche

If you want your ideas to count, enjoy writing challenging code and want to use your creativity to design leading-edge distributed apps using the newest tools and techniques, have we got a job for you! We need more team players like Chad, who can think for themselves and are driven by the need to build great software that makes life easier for our users. We'd love to hear from you if you have graduated with a BSCS, or are working towards a BSCS and will graduate in the coming winter or spring, and if you know C++ and object-oriented analysis, design and programming. Knowledge of database theory or Web programming is a plus.

Timberline Software Corporation is the leading developer of accounting and cost estimating software for the construction and property management industries, with more than 20,000 customers worldwide.
