Swish. Swish. Swish.

It is 6:03 p.m. on Monday evening, and all but one of the Oregon men's basketball team members have departed from the floor at McArthur Court after its practice session in preparation for Thursday's Pacific-10 Conference home opener at 7:05 p.m. against California.

Swish. Around the rim and in. Swish.

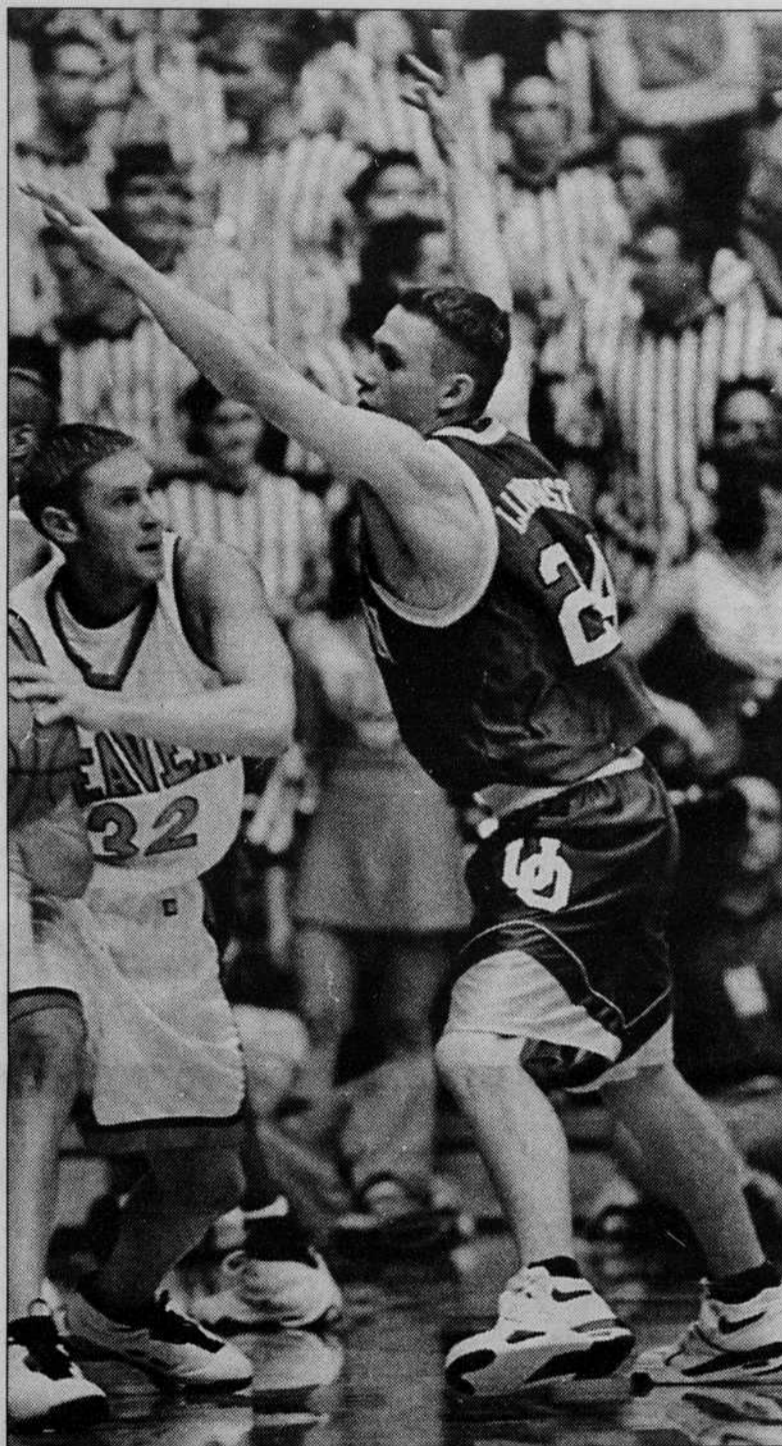

The lone player still shooting at a rigorous pace is sophomore guard Ben Lindquist, who is receiving chest pass after hard chest pass from assistant coach Mark Hudson. Lindquist, clad in green athletic shorts and a green practice jersey that sports the number 24, catches each ball in perfect shooting position and launches his smooth left-handed jumper soon thereafter.

Swish. Swish. Off the back iron and down.

Shooting extra shots when many of his teammates are either showering or lifting weights is nothing new to the sophomore transfer guard from Utah Valley State.

He stays after practice until he makes 100 three-

PAC-10 NOTES

Oregon Daily Emerald

When the top-ranked team in the nation hosts the No. 5 team in the opening weekend of Pacific-10 Conference play — and loses — one would expect that game to get all of the attention.

Wrong.

All anybody seems to be talking about this week is the number 61. And we're not talking about Roger Maris and Mark McGwire, folks.

Eddie House, Arizona State's sensational senior shooting guard, lit up California for an eye-opening, jaw-dropping 61 points in the Sun Devils' 111-108 victory in double overtime last Saturday.

And he did it by making 18 of 30 shots from the field, including 7-of-10 from three-point range, and a school record 18-of-19 free throws.

The point total equals the Pac-10 record set by Kareem Abdul-Jabbar who recorded his 61 for UCLA on Feb. 25, 1967.
