Like a pesky third-grade brother that never seems to leave his big brother's side, the youth-oriented California Golden Bears stuck around for most of the 40 minutes of action Thursday night before finally running out of gas.

And when they did, the Oregon men's basketball (11-2 overall, 2-0 in Pacific-10 Conference) was right there to dispose of them 83-68 in front of 8,666 rowdy fans at McArthur Court. The Ducks now have their sights set on a much more experienced opponent, third-ranked Stanford, on Saturday.

"We got off to a good start offensively and our guards did a great job against their young back court," senior forward A.D. Smith said. "We didn't play our best

■ Sean Lamplé's 29-point effort is offset by the sloppy play of California's freshmen in the Golden Bears' loss

The taunts echoed from the student section at McArthur Court.

Lamplé, you suck! Lamplé, you're overrated!

There were reasons the students — as well as others in the crowd of 8,666 — were trying to get into the head of California's Sean Lamplé on Thursday night. The 6-foot-7 junior forward was California's only legitimate scoring threat on a young team with four true freshmen in the starting

The Ducks down Cal, Stanford is next

No. 23 Oregon gets its second Pac-10 win, beating Cal 67-51 in Berkeley Thursday night

One more. After beating California 67-51 on Thursday night in its ninth-straight road game during this utterly draining, school-record, 10-game-long road odyssey that the No. 23 Oregon women's basketball team (11-4 overall, 2-0 Pacific-10 Conference) is on, there's only one game left before the Ducks can return to their beloved McArthur Court.

One rather big game. One with conceivable Pac-10 title implications.

Because it's against Stanford — at Stanford.

And like most of their Pac-10 counterparts, the Ducks haven't won a game at Maples Pavilion in years. Since 1987, in fact.

Saturday will be as good an opportunity as any for Oregon to do so, especially because right now the Ducks are rolling.

They let the less-experienced Golden Bears (5-7, 0-2 Pacific-10) hang around for a while, even allowing them to pull to within six points with 12 minutes to go.

But from there Oregon — currently ranked No. 42 in the Ratings Percentage Index despite its top-25 placement in both the Associated Press and ESPN/USA Today coaches' polls — took over, finishing the game with a 20-10 run. Junior forward Angelina

Wolvert connected on all six of her shot attempts, finishing with a game-high 15 points

Nicole Strange, the Ducks' only senior, continued to shoot tremendously as she has all season. She went 7-for-8 and finished with 14 points.

Sophomore point guard Shaquala Williams wound up with 13, to go with her six assists.

Center Shavaki Jackson led Cal with 12 points.

With Thursday's victory, Oregon head coach Jody Runge extends her record to 13-0 against Cal.

The Ducks' game with Stanford will be aired on FoxSports Network at 1 p.m.
