Jan and Clay Jamieson were married last summer on the University campus and are shown here with Autzen Stadium in the background. Clay Jamieson works for the athletic department.

Campus wedding bears Oregon athletic theme

He proposes. She accepts. What next?

This is the step when most couples pick out a church, a temple or another typical location to exchange their vows.

Clay and Jan Jamieson chose a more out-of-the-ordinary wedding ceremony, however.

"We thought it would be kind of neat to have [our wedding] at the University because of Clay's affiliation [with the athletic department]," Jan says. Clay, a University graduate, is an assistant athletic trainer, working specifically with the men's basketball team and track and field athletes.

The July 3, 1999, wedding was held on the lawn of the Collier House because the couple liked the lawn area and desired an outside service. The reception followed at the Stadium Club, free of charge, thanks to Clay's job.

Clay received his bachelor's degree in exercise movement and is originally from Tucson, Ariz. He went on to complete his graduate work at the University of Arizona.

Jan graduated from the University of Arizona with a psychology degree. The couple now resides in Springfield.

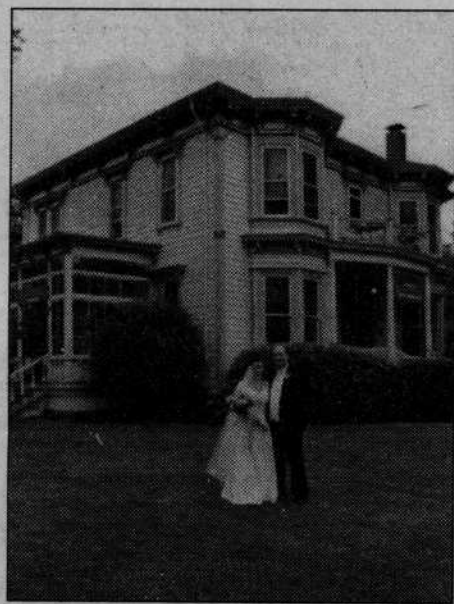

The two finally met at Clay's family-owned business and were engaged in June 1998. By November of that year, they were making plans for their green-and-yellow tinged wedding theme.

"At first, when we were going to have [the reception] at the Stadium Club, I wasn't quite sure how I felt because it was the football stadium," Jan says. "I thought we were going a little bit over the top with the athletic connection. It turned out to be really beautiful."

As for the actual ceremony, Jan remembers that good fortune chimed in later, as well.

"One of the coolest things was that the chapel bells rang right as we were saying our vows," Jan recalls. "I don't know where the chapel is on campus, but it was very weird."

And a nice addition to the special day.

Facts on a campus wedding

Major University events, such as commencements, are given first preference for scheduling. Non-University requests are considered when space is available.

Non-University organizations and individuals pay a $50 room or space reservation deposit at the time the tentative reservation is made. In the case of cancellation, this deposit is non-refundable. Full payment is expected 30 days before the event.

University policy requires that events involving alcohol, special hours of operation and certain other events be staffed by University personnel.

For more information call University Scheduling and Services at 346-6062. The office hours are Monday through Friday between 8 a.m. and 5 p.m.

Preparation, budgeting lessen wedding stresses

Instead of hiring a wedding coordinator, many couples find it's cheaper to plan themselves

By Erin Marshall

Planning a wedding can be like taking on a second job.

While most wedding ceremonies take place over just a single day, preparations can take up to a year to finalize, says Michael Ferguson of Heritage Photography Studio.

Unfortunately, wedding coordinators are usually more expensive than young couples can afford, which leaves them with no other option than to pull up their bootstraps and do it themselves.

A big factor to consider is the wedding's cost. Couples can spend thousands of dollars on the special time if they don't know what their limits are from the beginning, bride-to-be Rachel Brink says.

"The Internet has some useful tools on organizing your budget and planning everything around that," she suggests.

Brink has been planning her summer 2000 wedding since November.
