USC's Jeff Trepagnier got off with probation for his role in Saturday's brawl at ASU.

Dan Gadzuric and the underachieving Bruins find themselves looking at an NIT bid.

"He just came up and there was a big squabble," Trepagnier told the L.A. Times. "He said something, but I can't remember what it was. The next thing I know there was a big gang of people."

Storey insisted that the whole mess was the result of the Trepagnier punch.

"I was hit and then all these people piled on top of me," Storey said.

It all started innocently enough. In USC's 95-92 overtime win over the Sun Devils on Jan. 20, Trojan players Sam Clancy and Jarvis Turner were injured. The team was very upset about the physical nature of the game, but the bad feelings were brushed aside until the teams played again.

And that happened to be Friday in Tempe, Ariz

Both teams were sharing the Arizona State recreational center for practice, and the Trojans had the floor first.

USC went 45 minutes long. When the Sun Devils finally got in their own gym they were left with some interesting messages.

Obscene messages were written on USC's basketballs, and, naturally, the Sun Devils presume were written by the Trojans.

You expect that from the California schools," Storey said.

It was not surprising that when game time arrived Saturday, fouls were dished out like candy on Halloween.

Officials called 58 fouls, and 32 on the Sun Devils.

"The whole game [USC] guys were getting hit pretty hard," USC head coach Henry Bibby said. "I think the officials let the game get out of hand from the beginning. And then you get altercations like this. It's terrible."

Trepagnier was quick to show reporters his own cut lip that was the result of an Eddie House elbow. He also noted that Storey had elbowed him in the back of the head.

House, however, believed that he was intentionally elbowed twice during the game.

"They are classless," House said. "I lost all respect for [USC] the way they handled themselves at the end of the game, the way they were talking during the

Punishment, or lack thereof

On Tuesday, Pac-10 commissioner Tom Hansen went soft on the players involved, only dishing out probation.

Trepagnier, Storey and Arizona State's Tanner Shell got probation for the rest of the season. Shell was one of the players that joined the brawl after the initial altercation uation is behind us," Arizona State head coach Rob Evans said. "We take pride in respecting our opponents and operating within rules, both on the court and off."

Finally, no UCLA

ESPN and the Sporting News have noticed. It's time for UCLA to give up.

The Bruins (13-11 overall, 4-8 Pac-10) have lost six of seven and were outscored 203-159 in their two losses in the desert last weekend.

So in this week's NCAA projections UCLA was among the teams hoping for an NIT bid.

"I wouldn't play [in the NIT]," UCLA guard Earl Watson said. "No one would play. That's not our goal."

And then there were three

Both ESPN and Sporting News only gave the Pac-10 three representatives in the NCAA Tournament: Stanford, Arizona and Oregon

ESPN — taking note of Ore-gon's loss to Washington dropped the Ducks to the eighth seed in the East Region in Winston-Salem, N.C., on March 17, against Notre Dame.

Don't get too giddy.

A win against the Fighting Irish would set the stage for the Ducks to play a team slightly better ---Duke.
