After the Wildcats' Gilbert Arenas hit a jump shot, Jones responded with another field goal. On Oregon's next possession, Jones hit a shot from behind the arc to cut Arizona's lead to 80-76.

Then, following an Oregon timeout, Jones was fouled by Walton on a drive to the hoop. He made both free throws, and the Wildcat's lead was cut to just two points.

On the next Oregon possession, Jones' unselfish play yielded one of the biggest field goals of the game. Streaking down court, Jones received the ball from Darius Wright and elevated. While in mid-air, Iones saw Alex Scales in the corner of his eye and made a nice assist that knotted the game at 80-80.

'Alex was open at the last second," said Jones, who scored a career-high 27 points against Arizona. "I was going to take the shot, but I saw him open, and I'm real comfortable with the ball in his hands. He made a great play."

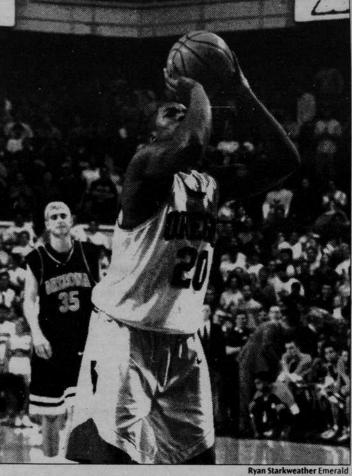

After four Wright free throws put Oregon up 84-81, Jones had a chance to erase last season's demons from the free-throw line. He calmly approached the charity stripe and sank both.

The rest is Mac Court history.

"I was thinking about last year when we had them beat at home," Jones said. "I kind of slipped up at the end, and I knew that wasn't going to happen again.

The coaches have been on me, and I wanted to come out and show them the real Frederick Jones. I haven't showed it all year, and I think tonight was a stepping stone towards that.'

Scales said he wasn't surprised with Jones' spectacular play.

Freddie Jones shines brighter than ever Saturday, including the deciding free throws.

"He stepped up big," said Scales, who finished with 20 points on 8-18 shooting. "I knew he would because last year he missed those free throws and he was disappointed. I had a feeling he would play great.'

Wright agreed. "The coaches have been on him, so he was due for a big game, Wright said. "He played great, and he was aggressive on offense and defense, as well as rebounding.'

Oregon forward A.D. Smith said Jones' composure is a good indication of his development thus far in his young career at Oregon.

"I guess it was one of those grooves you get in," Jones said. "I guess the bucket felt real big to
