Men's recap

"When I looked at our schedule at the beginning of the year, I saw those four games in the middle of the conference," Kent said. "That was our season because I felt that we would have momentum going up to that point, and if we could weather that stretch, we would be OK."

"Even though we lost at Arizona, we grew so much as a team, and we knew we could beat them and go down and play with them on their floor and it set up the game coming back here."

After a four game road stretch, the Ducks returned home to rout Washington State, spurring the Cougars head coach Paul Graham to proclaim that Oregon "can run as well as anyone in the nation, including Cincinnati."

But instead of running, the Ducks looked as if they were walking in their next game. The Huskies — led by Oregonian Thalo Green — upset Oregon 67-58.

A trip down to Los Angeles the following weekend would also end in a split. A loss at UCLA appeared that it could devastate the Ducks, but Oregon came back to beat USC without Smith, who left early in the game with a broken cheekbone.

Then came the Miracle at Mac. Darius Wright's three-point prayer pushed Oregon past Arizona State, and Arizona lost an 18-point lead as the Ducks' topped the then-No. 3 Wildcats, 86-81.

Oregon concluded one of the best seasons in school history with a convincing 85-63 Civil War win. Now its just a matter of time before it is seen whether or not the Ducks can continue their success in the postseason.
