Tuesday, April 11

The film "Stealing Heaven" will be shown from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. in the Sacred Heart Auditorium. A $5 donation is requested. The film is based on Marion Meade's novel by the same name. It is the true story of the unsanctioned love relationship between the 12th century French philosopher Peter Abelard and Heloise, the niece of Canon Fulbert of Chartres. The film is unrated, contains some nudity and may not be suitable for children.

Dance Africa celebrates Africa Day and launches the University's International Week activities with a high-energy performance of traditional dances and drumming from various ethnic groups in South and West Africa. The event begins at 8 p.m. in the Dougherty Dance Theatre in Gerlinger Annex. The price is $2, and proceeds help fund Dance Africa's visits to area elementary schools. For information, call 346-3386.

CRIME WATCH

Reported April 3 through April 10:

- April 8: Criminal Mischief II, 90 Commons Drive, attempted break-in
- April 9: DUII, 1200 block Hilyard Street, subject ran red light
- April 9: DUII, 1300 block Columbia Street, failure to obey traffic stop
- April 10: Public Indecency, 1200 block Alder Street, masturbating in public

Crime prevention tips of the week from OPS Officer Bob Guse:

1. In a grab-and-go theft, keep your head and try to remember the description, last-seen running direction and any other important information we might need to know. Remember our emergency number is 346-6666 on campus.
2. Get to know the company before you subscribe to a magazine through it. Selling bogus subscriptions to students is a favorite scam among truly artistic thieves.

Museum

"We're extremely pleased to have received such generous donations," McDonald said. "It would take several more years if we didn't have help."

Papé, a local business owner, made the contribution to the campaign as a birthday gift for his wife, Susie, two weeks ago during a party at the museum.

"I was totally surprised," said Mrs. Papé, a member of the museum board.

McDonald said the Papés are also supportive of the athletic department and the business school. "They're really great people," McDonald said. "They're very committed to the University in many areas."

Public support is crucial to the development, said Kaci Manning, manager of public relations at the museum.

"We not only rely on the public's financial donations but their support when it opens," Manning said. "Our goal is to have a full building all the time."

Beginning next spring, the 70-year-old building will receive its first renovation that will more than double its size to 63,000 square feet. The new look will feature a café, a store and an interactive gallery.

Museum director Dave Robertson said he hopes to attract traveling exhibitions to the new 4,700-square-foot exhibit gallery when the project is complete in 2003. The renovation will provide space for all of the 13,000 art collections that now fit in space originally intended for about 3,800.

Once construction begins, the museum's access will be unavailable to the public. Despite efforts to keep it open, Robertson said the museum must close during the two-year construction period. The museum staff will focus mainly on teaching during that time.

"We tried to design the plans so we could keep part of the museum open during the renovation, but it's just not possible," Robertson said. "It would add months to the project and $1.5 million."

In addition to being an important project for the community, the renovation will provide better opportunities for students and faculty, McDonald said.

"This will have a big impact on campus for many academic disciplines," she said.
