Feeley

Feeley was again given the start the next week at home against Arizona State, but he only completed nine of 25 for 134 yards in the first half. And again Bellotti handed the ball over to Harrington in the second half.

And as all Duck fans remember, Oregon won a wild 17-13 affair in which Harrington found Tucker in the end zone with only nine ticks on the clock.

Harrington ended up taking over the starting job, and Feeley was back on the sidelines — the spot he had occupied for the previous three years — one as a redshirt and two as a third-string quarterback behind Akili Smith and Jason Maas.

Questions surrounding his arm crept into some people's minds, but most were more caught up with Harrington and the team's astonishing success.

Feeley was left behind in the shadows for the rest of the season. And sure enough, in the winter it was determined that the quarterback — who had waited so long for his turn to shine — had some painful nerve damage in his elbow.

Feeley was required to wear a cast during the winter, and he was unable to work out. It was yet another challenge that stood in his way.

"That was really frustrating," Feeley said. "I didn't know what was going on. I wasn't sure if I was going to have to have surgery or if it would heal on its own. It's fine now, but it's still not where I want it to be."

But that's not stopping the Ontario, Ore., native from engaging in yet another Oregon spring quarterback battle. Last spring it was the heated battle between Feeley and Harrington that drew plenty of spotlight, but this spring things aren't exactly the same.

how well we played them at their home field," Custer said.

Confidence is the underlying theme for Oregon this homestand, both at the plate and in the circle. Connie McMurren (13-13) and Andrea Vidlund (16-4) are coming off good outings against Portland State. Vidlund is currently boasting a team-leading earned run average of 1.90, while McMurren leads the squad in strikeouts with 117.

"Andrea has started to work hard and keep her mind open to the mental aspect of pitching," pitching coach Tom Royder said. "Connie has been very stable for us this year. She is very smart. She is able to work the count and use the break on the ball to her advantage."

Royder would like to see McMurren repeat her performance from the previous encounter with the Wildcats when she threw eight strong innings, giving up only three runs.

Royder added that the Ducks won't change their strategy all that "Probably the main difference between this spring and last is just the media," Feeley said. "Just having to deal with questions day in and day out. How did you do today compared to Joey?"

"So it's been less competitive in that aspect, but as far as on the field, it's still really competitive between the two of us."

The quarterback duel will certainly still be one of the major focuses of Saturday's annual Spring Game at 1 p.m. in Autzen Stadium, for which admission is free.

"Joey Harrington is the starter based on the way we finished the season," Bellotti said. "But we have two great quarterbacks, and as I've said for many, many months now, I'm pleased with that."

"We're very fortunate and very blessed."

It would be easy for Feeley to feel the exact opposite of his coach. But the soon-to-be senior is not complaining. Rather, he's competing.

In the scrimmage last Friday, Feeley looked impressive in completing seven of 10 passes for 68 yards and a touchdown.

"I'm always confident," Feeley said. "I don't look at this spring as a chance to prove myself because people know what I can do."

Teammates are amazed at how well Harrington and Feeley handle such a delicate circumstance.

"I'm surprised with how well they do," fullback Josh Line said. "It's a really weird situation. Either one of them could probably start at any other Pac-10 school."

But instead both QBs are in Eugene, and that's fine with Feeley. He is as excited as ever just to get back on the field on Saturday and get his arm back to where he knows it can be.

"I'm really excited to play in front of a crowd again at Autzen," Feeley said. "I'm going to get through this and get back on course."
