Storm opens training camp

By Mike Wells
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — The fledgling Seattle Storm made it through the first day of training camp — but it wasn't pretty.

"We've got a lot of work to do," coach Lin Dunn said after the team's first practice Wednesday. "There's players that need to get into better shape. This is expected, though."

Getting players into shape is one of many things Dunn hopes to accomplish before the first-year WNBA team's opener May 31 at Sacramento.

"We have to practice every day with the idea of signing the 11 players that are going to make the final roster," she said. "So day in and day out we're not only practicing, but we have to evaluate some players because we have to make some cuts."

"While we're doing that, we have to get our offensive and defensive systems in and learn to play together."

Sixteen players reported for camp. When Seattle's top picks in last week's draft, Kamila Vodichkova and Nina Bjedov, arrive next week, they will bring the total to 18.

Vodichkova and Bjedov are trying to get their visas from the Czech Republic and Yugoslavia, respectively.

Dunn is mixing a group of young, inexperienced players with 10 players who have either played in the WNBA or the former ABL.

"We got some players with experience and we got athletic players," said Dunn, also the team's general manager. "We got the kind of players I want to build this franchise around."

Point guard Sonja Henning, expected to run the show and provide leadership, is a familiar face to Dunn. She played under Dunn in 1998-99 with the Portland Power of the ABL.

Henning also brings WNBA championship experience. She started all 32 games last season for the Houston Comets, the defending league champions.

"Houston was a great experience," Henning said. "I learned a lot from playing on a team that was winning. Hopefully I can bring some of that experience to this team."

Charisse Sampson and Charmin Smith also played for Dunn — Sampson on the USA Basketball Jones Cup Teams in 1994 and 1995 and Smith in 1997-98 with the Power.

"It's good to have players in camp who played for me before," Dunn said. "They can help out some of the younger players."

Angela Aycock, who played for the defunct ABL Seattle Reign from 1996-98, and former University of Washington standout Jamie Redd are trying to make the Storm roster.

Aycock averaged 7.1 points and 2.9 rebounds in three seasons with the Reign. Redd left Washington as the school's all-time leading scorer with 2,207 points.

"It's a good opportunity," Redd said. "There's nothing guaranteed though. I'm in the same position as everybody else."

Redd left practice at the midway mark Wednesday with a slight ankle sprain. She was expected to practice Thursday.

The Storm players don't plan on offering any expansion team excuses this season.

"We're not looking to be a first-year team," Smith said. "Initially it's going to be a stepping stone, but we want to make teams in the league respect us."

Seattle plays four preseason games, including a May 13 Tacoma Dome contest against Utah and a May 19 game against Los Angeles at Bellevue Community College, before the season-opener May 31 at Sacramento.

Seattle ends losing streak with win

By Jim Cour
The Associated Press

SEATTLE — Considered all but dead after two straight woeful performances on the road, the Seattle SuperSonics are headed back to Utah for a deciding game 5 in their first-round playoff series with the Jazz.

Gary Payton had his first career playoff triple-double with 35 points, 10 rebounds and 11 assists, while Rashard Lewis had 20 points and Vin Baker added 18 as the Sonics made it two straight wins at home with a 104-93 victory Wednesday night.

The Sonics held Utah to seven points on 3-for-21 shooting in the second quarter, but the Jazz came back to get within two points with 7:16 left. Payton helped the Sonics pull away again with his 15 points in the final period.

Byron Russell led the Jazz with 26 points, while Karl Malone had 23 points and 14 rebounds.

Game 5 will be Friday night and the winner moves on to face Portland in a best-of-seven second-round series that begins Sunday in Portland. The Trail Blazers wrapped up their first playoff series against Minnesota in four games Tuesday night.
