a member of a sorority or fraternity allows a student to reside with about 40 to 70 of his or her peers.

"You aren't put with a huge group of strangers like in the dorms, and you don't have to live with just one or two other people like in an apartment," said Lisa Nicholson, a member of Gamma Phi Beta sorority. "I live in a great place with 50-some fabulous girls."

Of course, there can be drawbacks to that set-up as well, when members search for some time alone. But for the most part, Nicholson said she believes University men and women come out of Greek housing system feeling better off for their choice to experience that type of living environment.

Many choices and changes are being made campus-wide as this school year draws to a close.

Soon, goodbyes will be said, thank-you-for-everythings will be expressed or maybe even sighs of relief

« It's better this way. We still hang out all the time, but we have our own space too.
