

Entice family, visitors with nearby shopping

■ The Saturday Market, Fifth Street Public Market and local malls offer weekend entertainment

By Sandra Colton for the Emerald

You've exhausted the theaters, you can't take your parents to the club and you don't want to stay on campus. There is only one thing left to do: Take your family shopping.

Eugene has something for nearly everyone, with a variety of shopping venues in the area. Some local favorites include Saturday Market, Fifth Street Public Market and the Valley River Center.

The Saturday Market is an outdoor market and a popular weekend destination. The Saturday Market showcases "over 200 booths filled with fine locally handcrafted goods, clothing, jewelry, candles, wood and leather work," according to the Eugene.com Web page.

"With the Saturday Market, you kind of get an idea of the spirit of Eugene," said Kim Still, assistant manager for the Saturday Market. "People of every walk of life, train of thought, mixing, mingling and coexisting happily."

"The most important thing is that the maker is the seller at the Saturday Market. That's something that doesn't happen hardly anywhere."

The Saturday Market is a non-profit organization with a mission to provide what its literature calls "a low-cost marketplace for local handcrafters and artisans and a weekly celebration for the Eugene
