end of school. Month-to-month or nine-month leases are also available.

If an apartment is too cramped, you may want to find a house to rent.

"A house is more private and separated and it feels like it's yours," said senior education major Rachael Dollinger. "I have a lot of space that I can call my own."

Renting a house usually ranges anywhere from $200 to $450, depending on where it is and how many people you are sharing the rent with. If you are interested in living with a lot of close friends, another option may be to live in a fraternity or sorority house.

Fifteen fraternity chapters and 10 sorority chapters have houses, so there are many choices. Each house has its own uniqueness, and all of them are very comparable to the residence halls in price and level of convenience.

Many times, students are so excited to move out of their family home and out of the residence halls that they forget living on your own can be very expensive. Aside from the rent, you must pay for utilities, laundry, and food, according to ASUO Housing Advocate Matthew Lieuallen.

Lieuallen says that where you should live depends on what environment you are looking for. However, he warns students that if they are going to live off-campus in an apartment, quad or house, they should look early. He adds that it's important to make sure students have roommates they can live with who are responsible and will pay the bills on time.

"It can really put a strain on your friendship if you keep receiving 'past due' notices," he said.
