Crater Lake Lodge open for June through October season

CRATER LAKE — Crater Lake Lodge has opened its doors for its 153-day visitor season.

About 50 of the lodge's 71 rooms were booked for Saturday's opening night.

Lodge manager George Winsley said he could have booked more but decided to keep the numbers workable for an unseasoned staff.

Tentative settlement reached in brewery strike

VANCOUVER, British Columbia — With some beer supplies running low, a tentative agreement has been reached in a nine-day strike by brewery workers.

The deal was announced Monday by Paul Smith, a spokesman for Labatt, who noted that the strikers have already rejected three previous offers that had been recommended for approval by their union leaders.

Details were withheld pending a presentation to the 155 members of the Brewery, Winery & Distillery Workers' Union Local 300. Union officials were unavailable for comment Monday.

Smith said some stores began running short of beer Friday.

The union represents workers at a brewery in New Westminster that produces one-quarter of the beer consumed in British Columbia. Last year the plant produced about 800,000 bottles of beer a day.

Waddling through the foliage...

Ducks congregate among the lush vegetation surrounding the Millrace, providing a picturesque scene for an afternoon stroll. This section of the Millrace is located on Franklin Boulevard and Onyx Ave., near the Millrace Studios. Students often take breaks from classes here to enjoy the serene setting and watch the wildlife.
