Track

Stanford fans, the Cardinal was at its peak in the 1,500 when Gabe Jennings broke the race open on the anchor leg, leading his team to a spirited, 1-2-3 finish.

The three Stanford athletes — Jennings, Jonathon Riley and Michael Stember — all stood together on the first place platform when they received their awards. Yes, it was a fun meet.

More fun

The always tantalizing participant list is starting to fill out for this year's Prefontaine Classic, slated to take place on June 24, less than three weeks before the Olympic Team Trials begin in Sacramento on July 14.

The 26th annual Pre Classic's latest announced attraction is pole vaulter Jeff Hartwig — who set the American record of 19 feet and 9 inches at last year's USA Outdoor Track Championships at Hayward Field.

Hartwig currently leads the outdoor world list with a vault of 19-6. He's the fourth highest vaulter in history, and he has indicated he'll be focused on breaking the Pre Classic record of 19-6 1/4, held by Sergey Bubka in 1994.

And, of course, Hartwig won't be alone in his attempt. Nick Hysong, so far No. 6 in the world this year, will compete as will Swedish national record holder Martin Eriksson (19 1/2). Former Duck Piotr Buciariski will be there too.

Gallantry

Revisiting last weekend's Pac-10s Championships again, sophomore Nattalie Wright sacrificed her first Pac-10 Championship race serving as a rabbit for teammate Katie Crabb in the 1,500-meter run. It was an effort to help the Oregon women pick up some much needed points.

"We talked about it," Crabb said. "I said, 'Nattalie, you don't have to do this; it's your decision.' But she was for it. It was very gracious of her."
