Huskies ready to attack Ducks

■ A week of extra preparation instilled anticipation and fear into the Husky football team

By Robbie McCallum
Oregon Daily Emerald

Two weeks ago, while Oregon was putting the finishing touches on its 42-13 non-conference victory over Idaho, Washington fans began to chant "Bring on the Ducks! Bring on the Ducks!"

This is not extraordinary, except that: a) Husky fans were in Boulder, Col., drowning out a rowdy Colorado home crowd of 50,454, and b) a bye week separated the Buffaloes game and this week's anticipated Oregon-Washington matchup. Also surprising about the chant was that it occurred with the score being only 17-7 in Washington's favor, and there was still a good portion amount of time left in the game.

One thing is certain, the sixth-ranked Huskies will be ready for the Ducks when they visit Eugene this weekend.

The undefeated Huskies are off to a blazing start with wins over then-No. 4 Miami (Fla), Colorado and Idaho. Rick Neuheisel's team has risen steadily in the Associated Press Top-25 polls, beginning the season at No. 15 and now residing in the No. 6 spot. After the three wins, the Huskies had a bye week to prepare for the Ducks.

During that time, Washington went through practice with increased crowd noise to simulate the hostile Autzen Stadium atmosphere. But nothing can truly create the ear-splitting clamor from the 45,000-plus fans expected to attend this weekend's game, which has been sold out for months.

“I think we are clearly aware of what kind of home crowd Oregon possesses. We have to find a way to stay within ourselves and play good football.”

Last week, UCLA used whisper drills to prepare for Autzen. The Bruins whispered their way to six illegal motion penalties, including three in a row in the first half of a 29-10 Duck rout. After the game, UCLA coach Bob Toledo described Autzen as Oregon's "12th man."

During its bye week, Washington got a close-up look at the Autzen mystique on national television.
