are scoring more than 32 points per game. Additionally, sophomore running back Joe Igber has shown signs of brilliance at times this year.

All this congruity in the offense has allowed Boller to find his niche in the system.

"With all these things developing, he's starting to grow," Holmoe said of his sophomore quarterback, who threw a career-high 349 yards against Oregon State. "These things — one, two and three — didn't occur last year, so it made it very hard for him to come. Now that these things are coming, he's coming."

Though the Bears have no shot at making a bowl appearance, Holmoe is not looking past the final two games of the season.

"We want to win the last two games, regardless of whether there's a bowl game or not," Holmoe told the San Francisco Examiner. "There's no conscious effort to try to play younger players... Some of the guys that might be second or third team, we're not going to play them for the sake of the future right now."
