Amundson

Obviously, Bellotti prefers to have Morris healthy and in the lineup as much as possible. Morris is the Ducks' leading rusher, averaging 4.4 yards per carry in 1,052 attempts. He is also quicker than Amundson and better at breaking tackles.

But the head coach points out that Morris and Amundson are two different backs, each with his own way of moving the football, and each can be effective in different game-time situations.

"I think they complement each other; I think they're different styles of runners," Bellotti said. "So it's a little different preparation for the defense. One is more of a strider and gets outside and runs, and the other is a cut-back darter, low-to-the-ground type player. So I think for us, it's been a plus."

Amundson could find himself becoming Oregon's primary running weapon in a couple years, after Morris uses his final year of eligibility next season. To be the Ducks' starting tailback would complete a comeback that started last season, when, as a freshman, Amundson was held to playing just four games because of injuries.

For now, he can't wait to walk onto center field at Autzen Stadium Saturday and take part in the all-important coin toss.

"I'm a team captain this week," Amundson said. "I was shocked at first, but it's fun. I get to do the coin toss, and I'm excited."

Allan Amundson

Year: Sophomore

Position: Tailback/kick returner

Home town: San Rafael, Calif.

In brief: After an injury-riddled freshman season, Amundson now gives the Ducks a second option at tailback. He relieved injured starting tailback Maurice Morris late in the game against Arizona State on Oct. 28, scoring the game-winning touchdown. Amundson also played most of the second half at WSU last Saturday.
