President/ Vice President

Eric Bailey and Jeff Oliver

Why should YOU vote for Eric Bailey and Jeff Oliver for ASUO Executive?

WE HAVE THE EXPERIENCE:

Eric is the Vice President of the Student Senate and serves on the KWVA Board of Directors and the University Library Committee. He is currently a Program Assistant in the residence halls and is a former Vice President of Residence Hall Association.

Jeff is the Housing Advocate on the ASUO Executive Staff. He also serves on the Student Life Advisory Committee, the Intercollegiate Athletics Committee and the Athletic Department Finance Committee.

WE KNOW THE ISSUES:

Renter's Rights- Eugene needs a Housing Code, and students need to be involved in the process.

Diversity- It isn't enough to simply bring it to campus; we need to foster diversity so that it is not only seen, but more importantly heard.

Safety- Students not only need to feel safe on campus, but also when they come to and from it.

Campus Relations- We need to build bridges, not burn them. This includes mending relationships with the UO Administration, the Eugene Police Department, Student Groups and UO Housing.

Other issues include Affordable Education, Incidental Fee Awareness, Student Athletic Tickets and expanding Student Voice. For greater detail, please see our webpage at <http://www.geocities.com/votebailey>

We want the ASUO to be YOUR Student Government. The ASUO should be the collective voice of ALL students on campus, not just a small few. If you would like to discuss anything, please contact us at votebailey@hotmail.com. Vote Bailey and Oliver for ASUO Executive!

Nilda Brooklyn and Joy Nair

Vote Nilda Brooklyn and Joy

Nair for ASUO Executive. Combined Nilda and Joy have four years experience with the ASUO. Nilda is the multicultural advocate, and Joy is the recruitment and retention coordinator. Joy is also a member of the Students of the Indian Sub-Continent. We are experienced in diversity, but are ready to address other issues that affect students. The cost of higher education is an issue that we are ready to tackle. Tuition increases make it nearly impossible for students to graduate without any debt. We will demand a tuition freeze from the state legislature. We are also ready to work with the community so they no longer view students as disposable income, and to make sure our city council representative actually represents us. We will make sure that DPS and EPD respond to student calls, and not just to hand out MIP's. Students should feel safe on campus and not fear DPS and their power position. We have goals of improving our own campus community starting with making ASUO a more accessible and friendly office. Students are exactly who we plan to represent. Student fees are being attacked across the country, and we will protect student control of student fees, which includes everything from multicultural programming to club sports, and the health center. We have chosen these issues because we believe that they affect the quality of education students receive on this campus.

Vote Nilda Brooklyn and Joy Nair for ASUO Executive to protect student interests.

And Wazeth looked down upon his disciples from atop of the jackalope and spake, "Why are you still following me?" And they replied, "Because you have much to teach us of your practices." And Wazeth climbed down from the jackalope and walked behind a large boulder and sayeth, "Wazeth must think about this and he must also commence with his practices." This was followed by the sound of a zipper opening and much fapping.

— The Book of Wazeth, Part III: The Reckoning, pg. 23

And one disciple of Wazeth looked towards the azurian sky and cried, "Why must beings suffer punishments for actions they did not commit?" And the sky replied, "... Then some falling bird poo splattered on the disciple's face. Wazeth looked at him and laughed. And thus, it was so.

tices and Wazeth read the magazines that were read by Onan. Wazeth looked up and saw that Onan was practicing. And Wazeth read, and waited, and read, and waited, and read. Then Wazeth looked up and saw that Onan was still practicing. Wazeth spake, "Yay for me." And he departed.

And in the end, when all the world was thrashing about. When the winds tore through the lands. When the fires burned and the waters rose. When comets plunged out of the sky. When it sometimes rained. Wazeth sayeth, "Vote for Sho*."

Think it's unimportant to vote in ASUO elections? As outsiders to the student government process, we are running on new ideas and a pleasant tone of optimism, because we truly believe that the ASUO can be both relevant and unobtrusive to the lives of students. After losing valuable support from generous alumni such as Phil Knight and having past Executive leaders arrested like common criminals, it's pretty obvious that who occupies the office can make a huge difference in the lives and education of Oregon students. That's why we're running for Executive office this year and the reason we hope you'll vote for us.

We think that we have the talent and drive to further ongoing student efforts in areas such as diversity, improving relations with city officials and police and increasing student representation in University decisions, all while putting forward an agenda of new ideas and amending for past mistakes.

There are plenty of opportunities to improve campus life for students if the right leadership is in place. You won't hear other candidates bringing forward new ideas like using the incidental fee to give a scholarship to a financially needy and deserving student or using the fee to fund a professorship to study improving higher education on campus. And that's just the beginning for a Bret and Matt Executive team.

It truly matters who you vote for. Please vote for reasonable people with new and exciting ideas. Vote for Bret and Matt for ASUO Executive. Learn more at <http://www.bretandmatt.com>

Eric Qualheim and Brian Boone

While growing up in a small Oregon town, Eric Qualheim had but one dream: to lead. Heeding his beloved grandfather's advice that "nothing of gain ever came without a lot of effort and a little elbow grease," Qualheim set out to lead. And lead he did.

First, Qualheim was elected third-grade president on an abolitionist platform. And thanks to the 14th Amendment, passed 140 years earlier, Qualheim succeeded. At the age of 10, he successfully lobbied to close a nursing home. By 15, Qualheim had rid Oregon of Communists.

After a stellar career in high school politics, Qualheim packed up his covered wagon and embarked on his three-month trek to Eugene — and the University. It is the leper healing and triumphant crime spree during this time that have made Qualheim an American hero.

But now he is here, running for ASUO Executive. The dream remains the same: to lead. But now, Qualheim has a new dream: to realize the promise of tomorrow's future. Today.

Brian Boone was raised by pirates off the shores of Ireland. He began dreaming of the promise of tomorrow's future as a small child grown weary of pillaging coastal villages.

As Vice-President, Boone will make it his top priority to stop the playing of the school fight song on the hour, instead having the bells chime "La Cucaracha."

With integrity rivaled only by that of former President Clinton, Brian Boone has it all: eyes, ears, mouth, nose, head and shoulders, knees and toes. Knees and toes.

Brad Schatzel and Kevin Stolle

By the end of spring term each University of Oregon student will have paid around $500 in incidental fees. This money is distributed to the EMU and its subsidiary groups, the Athletic Department, and about 80 ASUO funded or subsidized programs. The expected tuition hike will result in even higher fee revenues. Wiser management will be required to fairly allocate these student funds. If you, the student body, elect us to the ASUO Presidential and Vice Presidential Offices, we will be sure to do our best to equitably and impartially allot funds to the various finance committees. Our current positions at the campus dining center Grab and Go have provided us with the networking and problem solving skills needed to serve the students as the ASUO President and VP.

HEY DUCK BASKETBALL FANS! Imagine a time when the entire lower ring of Mac Court was the student section free from silently seated alumni. Well, that's how it used to be before the Athletic Department pushed students to the rafters to make room for old wealthy white men. If elected, we promise to use the clout of our office to return Mac Court to its original madness by expanding the student section again.

Brad Schatzel and Kevin Stolle are fully endorsed by the Big Blue House and its members.

ASPAC — 2yr term

Katelyn Carey

The Associated Students Presidential Advisory Council (ASPAC) is the liaison between the University President and the student body. It's important for this council to be diverse so all student organizations can be heard. I'm a member of the Greek Community, which is only a small portion of the student body. With my voice on the committee I could help represent, not only the Greek Community but also other small organizations on campus.

Often ideas are misunderstood on campus and the lines of communication must remain open and clear. It is this committee that allows rumors to stop, with full understanding of what goes on in the university's administration. With a positive, honest connection between the students and the administration we can prevent rumors and educate the student body.

I'm a sophomore and I have held two positions in my sorority in the past two years. These positions have improved my leadership skills. A representative must have the entire university in their focus at all times. I want to be that link between those who make the decisions on campus and those who must abide by them. On Election Day, vote KATY CAREY for ASPAC.

Student Rec. and Fitness Advisory Board — 2 yr term

Jon Lucchesi

As a member of the Student Recreation and Fitness Advisory Board, I would do my best to review facility policies, the use of student incidental fees, and do my best to represent the Recreation and Fitness Center to the community. Every year we pay incidental fees to fund activities that many
