ing 15 points a game, while center Melody Johnson averages 14.7 points and 6.9 rebounds per outing.

Last Saturday, the Sun Devils beat Arizona in Tucson. Levens was everywhere in that game, logging 14 points, 6 boards, four assists and two steals. Arizona State hadn't won in Tucson since 1993.

The Ducks are also fresh from a long-awaited victory. Oregon ousted Southern California last Sunday, but only after losing to lowly UCLA two days prior. The loss to the Bruins all but ruined any chance the Ducks have of going to the NCAA Tournament. Earlier this week, Oregon players expressed mixed views of whether or not they'd want to play in the WNIT. So, with the NCAA tourney and the WNIT possibly out of the question, the Ducks may be lacking motivation against the Arizona schools, right?

Wrong, said senior center Jenny Mowe.

“It's our last three games for me as a senior, as far as being in the Oregon Duck uniform, and I think there's excitement in just that,” Mowe said. “That it is the last three games in front of our home crowd.

We're definitely not going to host anything.”

And while the Ducks may not be favored statistically to win Thursday's game, Runge said the Ducks might be better off with their newfound giant-killer mentality.

“Quite frankly, they really like that role, so that's a good role for them to be in,” Runge said. “I think they have struggled with being the giant, and I think that's been a tremendous challenge for them, being wounded and not having everyone healthy.”

“It's a role that they like, so hopefully it's a role that will have a positive effect on them.”
