Sorry to bother you again

A bandit robbed a Chevron station in Albuquerque, N.M., and then ran to his getaway car where he discovered, to his dismay, that he had lost the keys. The clerk was talking to the cops on the phone when the frantic robber ran back into the office to look for them. Then the police came, and the guy just gave up.

So, what did you learn in school today?

North Bergen, N.J., High School students played a sex game in the classroom, apparently out of the sight of the teacher, who was sitting at her desk doing paperwork the whole time. At least nine kids engaged in various sex acts during a game of "Truth Or Dare," and, at one point, their giggling attracted the attention of the teacher who came down the aisle and asked what they were doing. They stopped, but resumed the game as soon as she went back to her desk. She has been suspended.

A leader who knows where he's headed

Greg Ritchey, a Green Party candidate for city council in Columbus, Ohio, scheduled a press conference at City Hall, then got lost trying to find the building. As reporters waited for him, he went instead to the Ohio Statehouse, where he wondered where everybody was. Finally, a reporter called him on his cell phone and gave him directions.

Equal schmequal; come here, baby!

Passengers on a flight from Stockholm to the United States said that Sweden's gender-equality expert, Lars Back, got good and drunk and then harassed the stewardesses. One witness said, "He was insolent, and his behavior towards the women of the cabin crew was abusive." Beck topped off the episode by vomiting into the lap of Margareta Winberg, the nation's female equality minister, who is his boss.

Stop counting us; I mean it! Blam!

A Bedouin shepherd was shot to death as he slept outdoors in Marsa Matrouh, Egypt, when one of his sheep knocked over his loaded shotgun, causing it to discharge.

Now, you be nice to the little lady, boys

A Texas deputy sheriff is going to become the first lawman from the Lone Star State to undergo a sex change operation. His boss says that the officer will be allowed to keep his job during the three-year process and has ordered the other deputies not to make fun of him.

FORMIDABLE VIOLIN

THURSDAY, APRIL 12, 8 PM

Brahms' sweeping concerto reigns supreme among the masterworks for violin—moving, thrilling, lyrical. And Stravinsky's famous ballet score lets the Steinway shine in the largest orchestral role for piano. Petrouchka dances with the exuberant colors and rhythms of a Russian carnival where puppets come to life.
