

Arson

Almost all the damage was to the second floor of the house, except for a shattered first floor window, Musil said.

University student Natalie White, who lives in one of the two apartments adjacent to the house, said she doesn't know anyone who would want to burn down the house of her landlords.

"Gino and Theresa are totally sweet people," White said. "Unfortunately, people sometimes party too hard and it really affects the residents."

White said the fire set on the porch looked like a big bonfire and left substantial damage to the bedroom.

"They can't live in the house right now because it's too damaged," White said. "There are holes in their bedroom ceiling."

Musil said the garbage can used in the fire did not belong to the landlords, and that the Casagrandes don't know of any people they suspected of setting fire to their house.

Officials from the EPD and fire department have begun an arson investigation, and the incident has been turned over to the EPD as a criminal investigation.

"Anytime that a fire can be attributed to a man-made cause, it is under an arson investigation," Power said.

Musil said the investigators do not know what was used to set the fire, except for the garbage can, which melted on the porch.
