ming, which includes distribution to over 100 sites in the county, volunteers at Food for Lane County are planning summer food programs and fundraising events.

Christine Puetz, development director at Food for Lane County, said the group's summer lunch program begins in July.

"This provides nutritious lunches five days a week for hungry children at 47 sites," she said. "It is the largest program in the state."

These free lunches supply children with 50 to 75 percent of their needed nutrition, she said.

In addition, the three Food for Lane County gardens, which include a youth tract, are expected to yield between 40,000 to 50,000 pounds of food this summer. Food for Lane County is also planning its first walk-a-thon, the Million Miles Walk, to be held in August. The event, which is an effort to gain money for hunger relief, will kick off in the EWEB Plaza and move through Alton Baker Park.

"Volunteers are needed any day of the week," Puetz said, referring to the list of programs Food for Lane County plans to delve into this summer. Those people interested in helping the organization can call volunteer coordinator Sheyla Norte at 343-2822.

Summer

"We notice about a 10 percent difference in the summer, but it's not huge," said Don Scarpelli, the Alder Street 7-Eleven franchisee.

Scarpelli said his branch of the convenience store chain relies heavily upon students for its business, and he has learned after 23 years to watch his payroll in the summer.

"I have to lay off some people, but the employees know coming in that we lose staff in the summer and they can come back the next fall," Scarpelli said.

Across the intersection, the dilemma is the same.

The Starbucks located on 13th Avenue also slows down in the summer, and shortens its hours to compensate instead of having fewer workers, said manager Jessica Eng.

Rennie's Landing, a local bar and restaurant, has been serving students for 20 years and adjusts its employees with each term at the University.

"The summer business has gotten better each year," said Bean, a waitress and bartender.
