Young golfers look to rebound

■ With two days to play, the Oregon women golfers look to be 23rd out of 24 teams in the NCAA Fall Preview

By Adam Jude
Oregon Daily Emerald

The good news is today's another day.

Freshman Jaime Seefried, playing in her first collegiate event, shot a 7-over 79 as the Oregon women's golf team finished Day 1 of the NCAA Fall Preview shooting a 36-over par

324. Out of 24 teams competing in a tournament at the Washington National Golf Club in Auburn, Wash., the Ducks start play today in 23rd place.

However, the Ducks have a shot to improve on the final two days of play.

Second-round action is set to start at 8:30 a.m. today. Monday's round was delayed several hours because of fog.

Seefried's 79 tied her for 69th place overall. Freshman Jessica Carlyon and senior Kathy Cho both shot a 9-over 81, which tied for 96th in the individual race. Johnna Nealy (83), Lacy Erickson (87) and Katie Cunningham (88) finished off Oregon's round Monday.

With a 5-over 293, Tennessee led the team competition Monday. Ohio State was second with a score of 294, while Pacific-10 Conference foes Southern California (298) and Arizona State (299) were third and fourth, respectively.

Washington State (327) is in last place.

Keyes

But then, with his image on the big screen, he raised a fist to the air that brought about emotional cheers.

"More so, I did it for my teammates to let them know I was OK and to tell them to keep fighting and win the game," Keyes said.

He was taken to Sacred Heart Medical Center where he was put in a room with no TV but was able to listen to the radio. He was released the following morning after suffering no fractures and gaining full sensation throughout his body.

"All the nurses in the hospital were getting sick of me because I every five or 10 minutes I was like, 'What's the score? What happened?'" he said.

Keyes's season was in jeopardy back in August when it was discovered that he had a narrow spinal column. He missed almost a week of practice after describing a tingling sensation in his hands after hitting somebody.

"At first, they told me my football career was done, but they researched it, and I kept going from one doctor to another trying to get more information," Keyes told the Register-Guard on Aug. 24 when he returned to participate in his team's final fall scrimmage.

Now, after just the third game of the season, his football career is really done.

"You have to look at the bigger picture," Oregon head coach Mike Bellotti said. "His family was involved. We had some very in-depth, soul-searching types of discussions. This incident was one, much more serious than one that occurred during fall camp, and two, I don't think any of us want to go through that again. That's way too scary and I feel very fortunate that he can walk away and be totally normal and lead a productive life."

"That's the best thing that happened in all this. The hardest part is that a lot of these young men's identity is wrapped up in being a college football player and that's the hardest transition."

Much to his credit, Keyes is already planning for the future. He wants to be a coach someday and will try to absorb as much as can from the Oregon coaching staff while he finishes school in Eugene.

Keyes, who has a two-year old daughter, Imani, who lives with her mother in southern California, is surprisingly handling this situation well considering how much he will miss the game.

"I love football dearly," Keyes said. "I really don't know how to respond or react to being out here and not getting ready to help my team win a game this weekend."

Keyes recorded two tackles and deflected one pass this season.

Belisle's broken foot ends his season

Another key Duck is lost for the season as Oregon junior offensive tackle Mike Belisle suffered a broken foot in Saturday's win.

"I thought Mike Belisle had made serious strides toward being a starter at right tackle," Bellotti said. "He played very well and he's out for the season most likely now. Those become opportunities for other people. That's the best way I can put it."
