airline industry," Bush said. "It's to tell the traveling public, 'Get on board, do your business around the country. Fly and enjoy America's great destination spots.'

Just as Bush uttered the words "get on board," an airplane roared overhead. "That's got a nice ring to it," he said.

The audience cheered. Many in attendance were threatened by waves of layoffs sweeping through the airline industry, but they waved American flags and erupted into chants: "U-S-A! U-S-A!" Still, as he outlined the new security procedures, it became increasingly clear that in almost every regard, patience would be required in the war against terrorism in general and bin Laden in particular.

For days, Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld and other administration figures have been downplaying the possibility of imminent military action. On Thursday, Bush acknowledged that his air security enhancements also would require some time.

"Others will become impatient, but not this great nation," he said. "We will stand firm and stand strong until we have achieved our mission."

In other developments:

- A measure of good news — though the term barely applied — came from New York, where Mayor Rudolph Guiliani revised downward the number of missing and presumed dead at the trade center.

He said that roster now included 5,960 people and might go lower as officials continue to weed out names that had been double-counted. Though still shocking, that reduced by at least 1,000 the previous number of missing.

- The Taliban's ambassador in Pakistan, Abdul Salam Zaeef, indicated for the first time in days that Afghanistan's leaders knew where bin Laden could be found — or at least how to contact him.

"Osama has now received the (clerics') recommendations" that he depart Afghanistan, said Abdul Salam Zaeef.

A planeload of Islamic clerics was scheduled to leave Pakistan on Friday, headed for Kandahar in southern Afghanistan to speak with bin Laden. Taliban and Pakistan officials said that the clerics would try to persuade bin Laden to leave Afghanistan to stand trial in another Islamic country.

- At the Pentagon, Rumsfeld announced that military personnel killed or wounded in the terrorist attacks would receive the Purple Heart, a combat decoration.

He also announced that a new civilian decoration, the Defense of Freedom Medal, would be awarded to non-military employees of the Defense Department who were victims of the attacks.

The civilian medal, Rumsfeld said, is "a recognition that the world has changed and we can no longer be certain of future wars being waged safely in their regions of origin."

- Attorney General John Ashcroft released photographs of the 19 suspected hijackers and asked Americans to contact authorities if they had seen any of the men before Sept. 11. He called it part of "a national neighborhood watch."

Also on the criminal investigation front, FBI Director Robert Mueller said he believes that Wednesday's arrests of people allegedly involved in fraudulently obtaining commercial licenses to carry hazardous materials were not related to the hijackings.

- Jesse Jackson said he was considering an invitation from the Taliban to take a "peace delegation" to Pakistan. The White House, which has called its demands non-negotiable, urged him not to go, and the Taliban said the offer originated with Jackson.
