Ducks to their first ever 40-loss season. After three straight post-season appearances, Oregon became the only Pacific-10 Conference team to miss the NCAA Tournament last year.

After last year's debacle, junior Lisa Wangler spoke of the team's disunity.

"I don't think it's going to be that easy to put this behind us," Wangler said. "All we can do is keep improving and keep learning."

Then-senior Triawn Custer added a prophetic statement after the 2001 season concluded.

"There's a lot of talent left on this team," Custer said. "Whether coach Gamez is here or whether these girls are here, this team still has a lot of potential."

Moos said he is unsure whether the Athletic Department will hire a new softball coach for the 2002 season. First-year assistant coaches Jennifer Jaime and Brent Rincon will take over as interim coaches until a permanent hiring decision is made.

The softball team has a pre-season tournament this weekend, and will continue practicing regularly until the season officially starts next winter.

Rick Gamez

Career at Oregon: 168-164-1 record, three-straight NCAA Tournament appearances from 1998-2000.

Before Oregon: Led Glendale College to 200-46 record and a junior college national championship, also coached at New Mexico State for two years.

Personal: Graduate of University of Texas-El Paso. Sixth-round pick of the Detroit Tigers in 1979.

Volleyball

Following the team's dismal performance against the Huskies, Ferreira and the rest of the Ducks tended to business in the form of a 90-minute post-game talk.

"It was a lot of heart and soul searching," Closs said. "It was a lot of getting stuff out, and it made a difference."

"I wanted to hear what they had to say," Ferreira said. "Probably about 75 percent of the discussion was (the players). It was kind of an airing-out situation."

When asked if he used the session to point out flaws in the team's play, Ferreira said, "When you've got a group that's wounded, you don't step on them. It's not them feeling bad about themselves and you going in there and lashing out at them. That doesn't accomplish anything."

Ducks last in Pac-10

After two weeks and four Pac-10 matches, the Ducks are tied for last place in the conference at 0-4. Other than Oregon, only California (3-5 overall, 0-3 Pac-10) can lay claim to not recording a win as of yet. However, after Friday, one team will have at least one. Oregon travels to the Bay Area this weekend to take on Stanford (Thursday) and Cal (Friday).

"I definitely didn't expect to be in this situation," Ferreira said.

Last season, the Ducks defeated only Washington and Oregon State en route to a 2-16 Pac-10 season. With Washington having already passed through Eugene, the much improved Beavers (9-3, 3-1) loom ahead. The Ducks travel to Corvallis on Oct. 10 to take on the surprising Oregon State team.

"Trust is something that's earned, respect is something that's earned," Ferreira added. "Competitive trust and competitive respect, especially in the Pac-10, is something you've got to hold on to."

Wild week in the Pac-10

The third week of Pac-10 play may be one to remember. With Stanford (9-1, 3-0) and USC (8-1, 3-0) tied for the conference lead, each match becomes more important.

The match of the week will take place in the Bay Area. But it won't involve the Ducks.

The upstart and surprising Beavers travel to Palo Alto, Calif., and take on national powerhouse Stanford. The Cardinal are ranked fourth in the USA Today/AVCA Coaches Poll, but lost to a tough Long Beach State squad last week.

The Beavers feature Pac-10 player of the week Laura Collins. Collins, a sophomore, helped Oregon State sweep Washington and Washington State. The setter racked up 100 assists over the weekend, including a career high 60 against the Cougars.
