the target of an attack.

Abdul Salam Zaeef, the Taliban ambassador to Pakistan, said Tuesday that "dozens of innocent civilians" were killed in the raids, launched after the Taliban refused to surrender Osama bin Laden, the top suspect in the Sept. 11 terror attacks in the United States. The pro-Taliban Afghan Islamic Press quoted a government spokesman in Kabul as saying 35 civilians had been "killed or wounded." But the deaths of the U.N. workers were the first independently confirmed cases of civilians killed in the air strikes.

Zaeef also said that Taliban religious leader Mullah Mohammed Omar survived U.S. attacks Monday on his home in the southeastern city of Kandahar, the spiritual capital of the hard-line Islamic movement. Zaeef's comments bolstered reports that the U.S. raiders are targeting Omar, who holds no official post in the Taliban government and would be exempt from a ban on U.S. assassinations of foreign heads of state.

Afghan exiles in Pakistan say they had received reports that U.S. bombs on Sunday struck a housing compound 15 miles outside Kandahar that Omar used until a few weeks ago. Rumsfeld has said that some of the American raids would be aimed at "leadership" targets, but he avoided comments on whether U.S. forces were specifically targeting Omar.
