Skipper

"My first memory of him is when I graduated high school with his brother Scott," Kearney Jr. said. "I just remember seeing this little 12-year-old at all of our practices. He was destined to be an athlete. He chose track, but he just as easily could have played major college football, or I just know he would have been a phenomenal college wrestler. It takes a special kind of person to be as successful as he was.

"You wouldn't know all this unless you really knew him, though. He had such humility. He wasn't a bragger."

Both Kearney and Juenemann consider themselves fortunate that they were able to recently chat with Skipper. Kearney ran into him in mid-September and Juenemann got a chance to catch up with his friend at Oregon's football game against Utah on Sept. 8.

"It was the first time I'd seen him in over a year," Juenemann said. "He was doing great and staying really active."

Said Kearney: "This sort of stuff really shakes you back into the real world."

Volleyball

Championship. She was named National Junior College Player of the Year, the MVP of the West Athletic Conference, as well as regional and national tournament MVP for the championship tournament.

When it came time to leave, Martin narrowed her choices to Oregon and Arizona. She had originally signed on to play for the Wildcats, but now is glad to call Oregon a "second home."

"After junior college, not many universities knew where I was or what I was going to do," she said. "University of Arizona, where I signed originally, was one, but when I went and visited both places, I didn't get the same kind of feeling there."

In high school, Closs also ruled her school and conference. In addition to volleyball, she also lettered in track and field and basketball, but fortunately for the Ducks, she chose to stay on the volleyball court and terrorize her opponents.

At Fresno State, the Spokane, Wash., native spent two successful seasons as an offensive force for the Bulldogs. She finished the 2000 season with 2.58 kills per game, enough to place her third on the squad. But more importantly, she led the team in blocks with 125 on the season, something she has continued this season. In 60 games and 17 matches, she has 75 total blocks for the Ducks, including 12 solo, good for second-best in the conference.

"(Oregon) wanted me here," Closs said. "It's an opportunity and it's a great place and a great program. Everybody is here to work and it doesn't matter how tired we are. Everyone comes to work, and they stay until we leave the gym."

Normally, as a season wears on, players have a tendency to wear down and become more complacent with their play. These two, however, have gotten better with time. Their ability to feed-off each other has certainly helped.

"When I'm out watching (Martin) there, and I'm freaking out saying, 'Come on, I want to do better,'" Closs said. "It's a back and forth thing but it's not a competition to see who can do better, as long as we get the job done."

Said Ferreira of his newest phenoms: "They get better every time they're out there. (They're) everything you'd want them to be, and they're a pleasure to coach every day. Their personality, their character (is great) and yet they're so different. It's been a pleasure to have them here."

"I don't know what I'd do without them."
