State Rep. Al King lights a candle "in hopes that the U.S. Supreme Court will continue to recognize the rights of women," at the Roe v. Wade 29th Anniversary Candlelight Celebration on Tuesday night at the First Congregational Church in Eugene.

"We know we are at the crossroads. We know that for years that the Supreme Court's support for Roe v. Wade has, in fact, been eroding," Bradbury said.

After his speech, Bradbury began his candlelighting. "I light this candle for the children of this country, may they all have the comfort of a loving home and family. Every child should be a wanted child," said Bradbury.

City Councilor David Kelly lit his candle "in memory of all the women who prior to Roe v. Wade did not have a choice," and "for all the women who survived back-alley abortions and for those who did not."

activists in the Eugene community.

"Working together, we can reassure that women all over America have a choice. We will continue to organize and defeat anti-choice legislation. Oregon women deserve a choice," Taylor said.

The tone of the event was quite clear: There isn't going to be any negotiating for a woman's right to choose, that history and facts of abortion show reasonable support for the right to choose, and that people need to speak out and show support for pro-choice issues and measures.
