high-risk area for theft. He didn't have exact numbers for the number of bike thefts there, but he said that because it's a dark, remote area adjacent to the edge of campus, "It seems fairly easy for someone to come through the fence between the campus and Williams Bakery and take a bike."

Vurek voiced stronger opinion of the area.

"Hell, you could go in there and make yourself a new bike from all the other bikes before anyone knew you were there," she said.

Bike tips

The Department of Public Safety recommends using two different types of locks when securing a bicycle, and when using a cord-style lock to intertwine it in the bike's front and back wheels as well as the bike's frame. DPS also recommends removing the bicycle's seat and keeping it somewhere safe when the bike is not in use.

store bicycles are a 75-bicycle capacity fenced-in area next to the Onyx Building, a set of 24 outdoor bike lockers between Oregon Hall and Deschutes Hall, another 24 bike lockers by the Science Library and six bike lockers outside the Student Health Center.

A spot in the Onyx Building storage area costs $20 per year, and the lockers cost $30 per year.

"They fill up pretty fast, though," Hicks said.

For the rest of the students, Schoonover said residence halls allow students to store bicycles in their rooms. She admitted, however, that "the rooms are small, and that could be difficult."
