Tar Heels comin' to town
Two seasons ago, Oregon soccer head coach Bill Steffen scheduled some of the toughest teams in the nation for his Ducks squad.

Now he's scheduled the toughest. North Carolina, winner of 16 national championships in women's soccer, will come to Eugene on Sept. 29. The Tar Heels were 24-1 last season, with their only loss coming to Santa Clara in the NCAA Tournament title game.

The Ducks will also play Portland, a Final Four team in 2001, for the second-straight season.

Oregon has four night games scheduled, the first ever at Papé Field, which will receive new lights during the offseason. The most intriguing of those night matches is an Oct. 11 match with perennial power Washington.

UO golfers win Duck Invite Chris Carnahan's birdie on the 18th hole lifted Oregon to a one stroke victory over Washington State on March 26 at the Oregon Duck Invitational, played at the 6,738-yard, par-72 Shadow Hills Country Club.

For the third straight round, Oregon was below par as a team, shooting a 6-under 282, to hold off the Cougars. The Ducks finished the tournament at 15-under par 849, one stroke better than WSU, which shot a 280 Tuesday.

"This was a big tournament for us to win," said Oregon coach Steve Nosler. "There were some very good schools here, and it was critical for us to have a good showing with postseason selections coming up."

The Ducks will participate in the Western Intercollegiate beginning Monday in Santa Cruz, Calif.

Jordan will sit out rest of season

CHICAGO (KRT) — Four seasons ago, the questions surrounding Michael Jordan's future hinged on whether the final image from his playing career would be of his right arm extended, a championship-winning jump shot having just swished through the net.

Now the questions are whether his final game will be statistically the worst of his career.

The Washington Wizards placed Jordan on the injured list Wednesday, and he will miss the rest of the season with a sore right knee.

"I think it is best at this point to rest the knee and let it heal properly," Jordan said in a statement. "I tried to get back and play as soon as possible, and early on the knee responded well. But after the swelling (Wednesday) morning, I think it's best to give it rest."

Jordan underwent arthroscopic surgery Feb. 27 for torn cartilage in his knee and missed 12 games before rushing back to play March 20 in Denver. But the knee continued to bother him, even in limited minutes. He played only 12 minutes and scored a career-low two points in Tuesday night's loss to the Los Angeles Lakers.

Jordan's team-leading scoring average of 22.9 points per game ranks as the second lowest of his career, ahead of only a 22.7 average in his second season with the Bulls in 1985-86. That's the same season he missed 64 games with a broken foot, his only previous stint on the injured list in 14 seasons.

Men's track

Still, Hartmann echoed the sentiments of the team members who think that peaking too soon can be dangerous.

"We've approached this year differently," Hartmann said. "We're trying to focus on peaking later in the season."

For Hartmann and the rest of the track athletes, the next meet will be either the Washington Dual next weekend or the Mt. SAC relays, held the following weekend.

But first, it's time for the field athletes to shine.

Women's track

Approximately two hours after the start of the hammer, the Oregon women's 4x800 meter relay team will begin its quest for first. The Ducks are the only Pacific-10 Conference squad to participate in the event.

Rounding out the day for the Ducks will be junior Alicia Snyder-Carlson in the 400 hurdles, a field that will include 76 athletes. Only Washington State senior Randi Smith accompanies Snyder-Carlson from the Pac-10 in the running event.
