UO rugby heads to nationals

■ The Club Sports women's rugby team advances to the Sweet 16 for the first time

By Jesse Thomas
for the Emerald

The Oregon Club Sports women's rugby team is going to Disney World, but they haven't really won anything yet.

The Ducks will be competing in the national tournament Sweet 16 in Orlando, Fla., this weekend. They enter the tournament as the overall 15th seed, and third seed out of the Pacific Northwest.

The women defeated UC-Davis last weekend in the Pacific Coast Regional Tournament to earn a berth in nationals.

"We can do a lot if we just find that one game where everything falls into place," coordinator Erica Kelly said.

Everything about the season seems to have fallen into place for the women, Kelly said. The Ducks have never made it to the national tournament and the level of play at regionals was more than they ever expected.

Kelly said that Oregon has a very dedicated team with rookies who have made a difference.

"We have a really cohesive team," Kelly said. "We just want to go out and play our best."

UO water polo in nationals, too

The Oregon Club Sports women's water polo team is two weeks away from the national tournament. And this year they will go on their own merit.

The Ducks competed in the tournament last year but only on a default because Washington could not raise enough money. But after defeating the Huskies 4-2 in regional tournament this year, Oregon leaves for Atlanta knowing they earned it.

"We have to go in with confidence," junior coordinator Amanda Studdard said. "We want to do as well or better than last year."

Oregon walked away with a fourth-place finish last year. They enter this year's tournament seeded fourth out of the 12-team field.

The women have been on a two-a-day practice schedule recently. They are very confident in their defense, but on offense they need to work on movement and shooting, Studdard said. Most importantly, the Ducks are just having fun, she said.

"We play much better when we are having fun and need to keep that frame of mind," Studdard said.

Ducks host triathlon

The Oregon Club Sports triathlon team hosted the third annual Duck Bill Chill Triathlon on Saturday.

It was a sprint distance triathlon that consisted of a 500-meter swim, a 12.4-mile bike and 3.1-mile run that began in the pool at the Student Recreation Center and weaved in and out of campus.

The Ducks had almost 80 competitors this year, a large improvement from last year, and were satisfied with the outcome.

"Our event gives a good opportunity for newcomers to get their feet wet, and for veteran triathletes to kick off their season," head coach Jay Williams said.

The Bill Chill Triathlon is put on as a fund-raiser for the team to raise money for their big season race, May 3 through 5. The team will travel to Lake San Antonio, Calif., to compete in the Wildflower Seagate National Collegiate Championships.

The Ducks compete in the Olympic distance consisting of a 1.5-km swim, 40-km bike and 10-km run on a rigorous course. Williams will compete in the event, which is more than twice the distance of the Olympic course.

Finally, the Ducks also feature two top athletes in the pole vault.

Sophomore Kirsten Riley has jumped at 12-5.5 this season, enough to earn her a NCAA provisional mark in the event. She is tied for 32nd in the nation.

"Kirsten Riley has vaulted really well and has made steps every year," head coach Tom Heinonen said.

Even better than Riley is junior Becky Holliday. Last season's No. 2 in the nation, Holliday is currently tied for fourth with a top height of 13-7.25, better than the NCAA automatic mark. Had she made a jump at 14-2 last week at Hayward Field, she would be the first collegiate woman to do so this year.

However, she is confident she will get there.

"I know what I need to do," she said. "I will make it."

Kenyon and the heptathlon

Senior Jenny Kenyon will compete for the second time this season in the heptathlon at Azusa Pacific University, starting off the weekend of competition for Oregon.

While most of the team's athletes will be at the Mt. SAC Invitational in Walnut, Calif. and the Pomona College Invitational, Kenyon will be at the neighboring university.

"Kirsten Riley has vaulted really well and has made steps every year."

Tom Heinonen
Oregon head coach

Kenyon previously competed in the heptathlon while the Ducks were in Tempe, Ariz., in March.

"She needs to make a major step this weekend," Heinonen said. "This is a great opportunity for her."

Injury Time Out

Compared to the men's squad, the Oregon women have been virtually injury free. However, that has not kept them out of the trainer's room.

Lundeen, who suffered an arm injury earlier in the month, will not make the trip to California as a precautionary measure.

She did, however, compete at last weekend's Washington Dual meet, placing fourth in the javelin at 144-09.

"The whole plan is for her to throw next week in Eugene," Heinonen said in reference to the Oregon Invitational at Hayward Field. "In hindsight, we should have held her out last week."

The Ducks will also be without junior Janette Davis. The Medford native competed last weekend as well, helping lead the Oregon's 4x100 relay team to a first place finish, but will not get the opportunity to run in California.

"She feels a lot better than we thought she was going to," Heinonen said. "We're going to hold her out this week and let her train more."
