recipients include W.S. Merwin, Jane Goodall and Wendell Barry.

The Orion Society is a cultural and literary organization based in Great Barrington, Mass. The society promotes place-based thinking and it has been the practice of the society to present the award to the recipients in his or her hometown during a weekend colloquium convened in their honor.

In addition to Lopez, attending authors include Terry Tempest Williams, Scott Sanders, William Kittredge, Ann Zwinger, Annick Smith and John Danie.

The University Environmental Studies Program is co-sponsoring the event. The public is invited to attend the open discussion and reading session 3 p.m. to 5 p.m. Sunday in 180 PLC. Adjacent rooms will be available for additional seating if needed. Representatives from the bookstore will be selling selected works by Lopez and the other participating authors. For further information contact the Oregon Humanities Center at 346-3934.

Heritage Month

Lee added that contestants would have to eat "something" culturally different from any food item found in the United States.

To continue the celebration, APASU will be hosting a fashion show at 6 p.m. on Sunday in The Buzz Coffeehouse. The show will include both casual and business clothing, as well as beachwear and pajamas.

"The fashion show has not been a part of our activities until this year," APASU Co-Director Kao Cha said.

The fashion show will begin with Asian poetry readings from APASU members Sophanna Kuch and Jason Cummings.

Other festivities for the month will include a short martial arts demonstration from the University's Wushu Club team. The Wushu Club will conduct a workshop on Chagquan, or long-fist, which is a popular form of fighting developed in Northern China with dynamic kicks and punches.

Women's Studies Professor Lynn Fujiwara will also give a speech in honor of heritage month. APASU will announce the location and time of these events at a later date.

The main event for the month will be at 6 p.m. May 18 in the EMU Ballroom, and will include a performance from "Here Now," a theater group from Los Angeles portraying issues many Asian Americans face in their daily lives, Ebuen said.

Pocketface, an alternative band from Eugene, will be performing along with a Portland Vietnamese American rapper Thai.

To end the celebration, APASU will host the Spring Mini-Olympics on May 19. Students will meet for the event at 2:00 p.m. in the Multicultural Center and participate in games such as sack racing, a tug-of-war, water balloon fights and a Slip 'N Slide competition.

For more information about any of the upcoming events, contact the APASU office at 346-4342.
