thousands of fans during football and basketball games, the men behind the Duck mask remain anonymous.

"When you're a Duck, people don't know who you are, but they like what you do," Raish said. "You don't get credit for it."

head coach Steve Nosler feels it suits Oregon's game well.

The Ducks will be playing for one of the top-10 spots to advance to the NCAA Championships May 29 through June 1 in Columbus, Ohio. But it is not just about qualifying, according to Nosler.

"We have a different attitude," he said. "We are not going to qualify — we are going down to win."

In singles, Panova lost, 6-3, 6-4, to No. 8 Peterson in the top spot.

Gieczys and Mendiburu lost their matches to give USC the win.

Gunnarsson won the first set of her match before it was suspended. Nyland and Nagle's matches were also suspended because they had no effect on the outcome of the match.

The loss ends Oregon's turnaround season. On March 9, Oregon lost to UCLA, had a 7-9 overall record and were winless in the Pac-10 Conference.

The Ducks, behind newcomer Panova, then won six out of seven matches, including over Washington for their first Pac-10 win in more than two years, to qualify for the NCAA Tournament.

"I was really happy with the way we fought," Griffin said. "One of our goals this season was to gain some respect, and I think we've done that."
