205 HELP WANTED

Research Assistant. Zebrafish Technician. The Zebrafish International Resource Center located at the University of Oregon is seeking a full-time zebrafish laboratory technician who will work weekends and holidays as well as some weekday hours. The successful applicant will have a Bachelor's degree preferably in biology with knowledge in genetics. Skills and knowledge in the areas of fish husbandry, aquaculture and various fabrication techniques are desirable. Primary responsibilities include weekend fish care (all aspects), supervising student employees, feeding fish during the week, and careful observation of the fish. Fish husbandry will include breeding, feeding, maintaining, and raising zebrafish, preparing food, and cleaning tanks. The job also includes some management responsibilities, computer skills, and general trouble-shooting. The work requires occasional heavy lifting, repetitive lifting of 5 to 10 lbs., and performing tasks in a hot and humid environment. The ability to integrate into a diverse work group is essential. Salary is commensurate with qualifications and experience. Candidates responding by July 1 will receive first consideration. Send resume and letter of interest to E. McCumsey, Institute of Neuroscience, 1254 University, Eugene, OR 97403-1254 or fax (541)346-4548. AA/EO/ADA institution committed to cultural diversity.
