served until about week after the restaurant opens, Victor said.

"It is a very special kind of taco," Victor said. "I know a lot of people have to drive to Salem or Portland to have these."

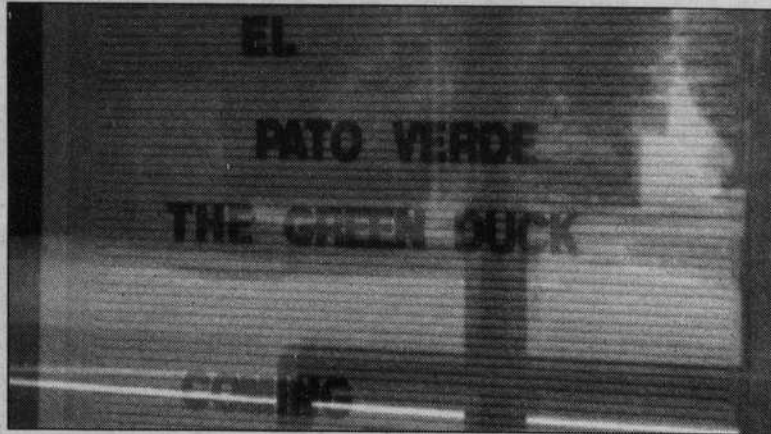

The meat that fills the taco is marinated the night before and then cooked slowly on the vertical rotisserie. Pineapple chunks are piled on top, so that the flavor of the juice seeps into the meat.

El Pato Verde will also serve dessert.

"We want to have a cake that is really good," Victor said.

Victor said the restaurant will offer "El Pastel de Las Tres Leches," or the Cake of the Three Milks, a Spanish treat with a unique flavor.

the drink menu as well.

"In the future, I want to have an espresso machine," Victor said.

The restaurant seems to be not only traditional, but also a constantly changing enterprise for the Valverde family.

their hearts out to earn a place at 104.7 KDUK's "Duck out of Summer." The radio station is sponsoring an "American Idol"-like contest.

Fifteen contestants will perform on stage in front of an audience and three judges. "Everybody just wants to be a star; that's basically what it boils down to," KDUK music director Steve Brown said.
