Pac-10

quarter points in a spirited comeback win over the Rams, a team that beat Colorado in the first week of the season.

Oklahoma State collapsed in a season-opening loss at Louisiana Tech. Ahead 36-18 late in the third quarter, the Cowboys gave up 21-straight points and lost, 39-36. OSU made up for the loss by pounding Northern Iowa, 45-10, last week.

UCLA should continue their early-season success with a win in Oklahoma, but with that many problems, the team quickly becomes a Pac-10 wildcard.

UNLV (1-1) at Oregon State (2-0) 4 p.m., TBS

Oregon State was a preseason favorite of many pollsters to be the sleeper team of the Pac-10 Conference, and the Beavers have done all they can to keep that stigma. Oregon State trampled Eastern Kentucky 49-10 in its first game, then traveled to Philadelphia to maul Temple 35-3 last week. The Beavers have relied on the accurate arm of Derek Anderson and a dominating defense to win their first two games, and look to continue the trend in TBS' first game of a new, national Pac-10 cable agreement.

UNLV has an early loss to Wisconsin, a win against Kansas and a legendary coach, John Robinson, who is going for his 121st career win Saturday. Robinson, an Oregon graduate and former USC coach, has 11 career wins over Oregon State, his most against any one school.

If Robinson can continue his Oregon State dominance, the Beavers might not be the sleeper team of the Pac-10 any more.

San Jose State (1-1) at Stanford (0-1) 7 p.m., local TV

Certainly, Stanford didn't lose last week at Boston College because of a few long-distance phone calls, did they?

Oh, but they may have.

The Cardinal's starting quarterback, Chris Lewis, was forced to sit out Stanford's season opener because of a few long-distance calls he made on the company's dime when he was an intern in the summer of 2001. Boston College edged Stanford 34-27 in the game, meaning that new Cardinal coach Buddy Teevens will be on the prowl for his first Stanford victory Saturday.

San Jose State played Washington tough last week and even led the Huskies 10-0 at halftime before falling 34-10. The Spartans have had success against the Cardinal, including a three-year dominance from 1998-2000. But Stanford broke that curse with a 41-14 pounding in San Jose last year.

Arizona State (2-1) at San Diego State (0-2) 7 p.m., local TV

Those poor Aztecs. After opening the season against a Fresno State team that almost beat Oregon, San Diego State faced a Colorado team still stinging from a season-opening loss to Colorado State. Now the Aztecs face a tough Arizona State team, and after a breather against Idaho next week, they travel to UCLA to take on another Pac-10 powerhouse.

Brutal.

The Sun Devils need to win this game in order to assert themselves as a Pac-10 title contender. Their only loss was to top-10 squad Nebraska, and ASU has blowouts of Eastern Washington and Central Florida to their credit. One of the question marks of the conference, Arizona State could answer those questions Saturday.

Utah (2-0) at Arizona (1-0) 6:15 p.m., local TV

Well, at least there's one Pac-10 game that nobody cares about. But wait, those in the neighboring states might care quite a bit about the game. The two teams have a rich history, including splitting the last 16 games in Tucson. Arizona has the upper hand recently, winning seven of the last eight. That eighth game, though, was the 1994 Freedom Bowl, which Utah won.

Utah has trounced Utah State and Indiana this season by a combined 63-16, and is looking ahead to a game at the "Big House" against Michigan next Saturday. Arizona took care of Northern Arizona in its opener, 37-3.

It's a border war that may be boring to those on the west coast, but is thrilling to the in-state people all the same.
