I have supreme aspirations for myself when I leave this University. I will work in a trendy office, I will wear a classy suit every day, and I will own (and use) some nifty Palm Pilot computer gizmo.

On my lunch breaks, I will meet with clients or enjoy a nice lunchtime meal at the local trendy restaurant. A good variety of dishes is imperative; I'll be eating here daily. And with the location of this restaurant, high prices will be tolerated, even expected.

I expect all of these meals will be at places much like Café Paradiso. This classy downtown café has great food, a great atmosphere, and a friendly wait staff that makes you feel like a welcome member of an elite young, professional society. The only thing it does not have is high prices.

Café Paradiso is located directly on the reopened Broadway, at the intersection of Broadway and Olive. Plenty of indoor and outdoor seating ensures a place to sit down and eat, but prepare to stand for the frequent and popular evening performances by local bands.

The menu has a variety of sandwiches, salads, soups, and an impressive collection of espresso drinks. The dishes focus on fresh ingredients and a wide range of flavors. The soups and specials change daily, and all of the food seems to be built from scratch. There are a good number of vegetarian options.

The ambiance is comfortably modern, with colorful abstract art displayed on the walls. The outside patio welcomes customers to sit and people-watch.

Café Paradiso is a perfect alternative to the typical lunchtime trip through the drive-thru, offering gourmet meals, quick service and low prices. You would feel welcome bringing any number of guests to this place, for a casual lunchtime meeting or a laid-back dinner date.
