With just one reception against USC, Keenan Howry (15) will break the Pac-10 record for most consecutive games with a catch at 43. The Trojans' Kareem Kelly also heads into the game with 42 straight games with a reception.

"He's the total package," Bellotti said of Williams. "He can go after the ball and it's just another weapon in that arsenal where you can't double anybody because they're all very, very dangerous."

"We have to regroup and get our house in order."

Mike Bellotti
Oregon head coach

USC presents a problem in the backfield, as well.

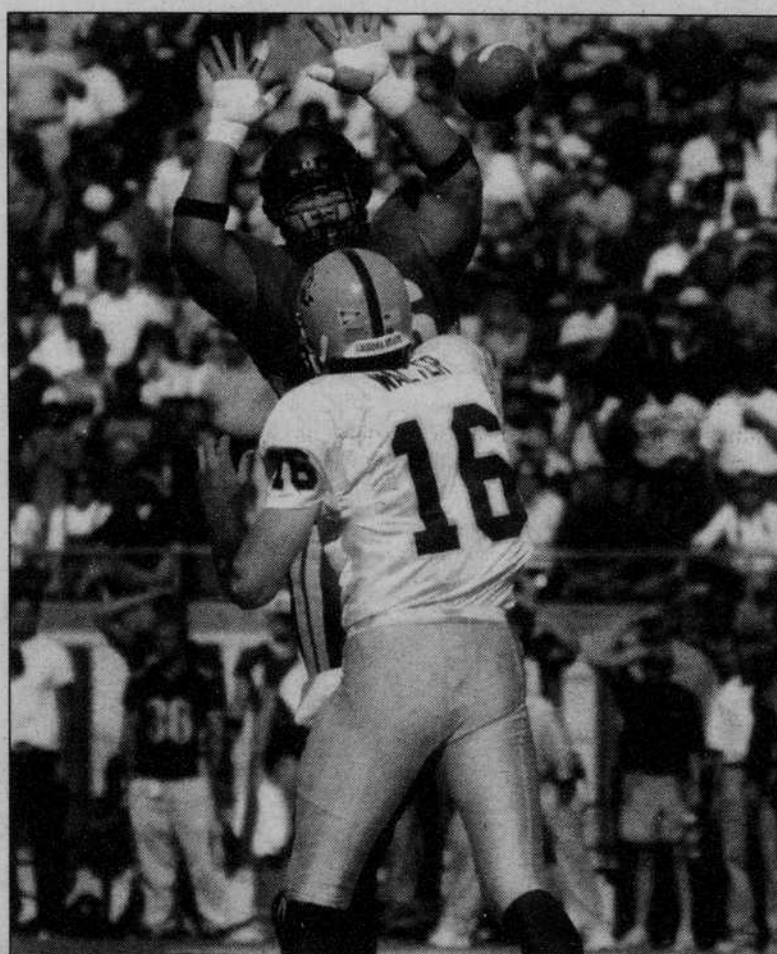

Senior tailback Sultan McCullough, who was held to 31 yards in a losing effort at Autzen last season, rushed for 176 yards on 39 carries in a win over Cal two weeks ago. Against Washington last week, McCullough was held tight by the Huskies — though the Trojans didn't need much of a running game.

"Oregon and the other teams are going to see the tape," USC offensive lineman Lenny Vandermade said after the win over Washington. "If they want to take away the run, we have some receivers that can hurt you."

The Ducks, for sure, will see the tape. But they have bigger issues to address.

"We have to regroup and get our house in order," Bellotti said. "I think our players are frustrated and angry but we need to put that frustration to work for us. We need to practice harder and we need to understand that we were in this same position a year ago and found ways to come back with greater resolve."

The matchup also showcases Oregon's top-ranked scoring offense, which averages 38 points per game, and USC's top-ranked scoring defense, which allows 18 points per game.

Haloti Ngata (jumping) helped stop the Arizona State rushing attack, but the Ducks couldn't stop Andrew Walter (16) in Oregon's first loss of the season last week.

It seems someone has to budge, right?

Besides Oregon's ability — or lack thereof — to stop the pass, the game could turn on USC's defense of Onterio Smith.

It should be an interesting development. Smith, the Pac-10 rushing leader at 133.7 yards per game, seeks his eighth straight 100-yard game against a USC defense that has allowed 100.3 yards per game, third-best in the league.

"If you can't stop the run then you can't stop anything," USC head coach Pete Carroll said. "We'll have to play the run very effectively to have a chance in this game."

One advantage Oregon may have is that USC has not beaten a ranked opponent on the road since 1995. Since then, the Trojans are 0-7-1 in those games, including a 30-27 overtime loss to Washington State on Oct. 5.

The Ducks have also won four straight over the Trojans, including the last three at Autzen.
