sipping tea at Savouré since August. "I had a friend who brought me here," she said. "I immediately fell in love with the place."

The Eugene-based fantasy writer said she visits the shop two or three times a week, where she meets friends, reads or writes.

"I like the relaxed atmosphere," she said. "I like the fact that I can come and hang out, not be in a hurry. I could stay for an hour, I could stay for two — it's all good."

Dailey said her favorite order is the Wedding Imperial tea with rock sugar and cream. She also makes tea at home and is building her own collection of Savouré fare.

The store also sells these selections at its Internet site, www.savoureteat.com. DeBusman said Savouré ships orders all over the country.

There's something in the air here that suggests the shop's secret goes beyond tea, and both DeBusman and Yarris said Savouré's essence lies in its laid-back, community atmosphere.

"It's wonderful to get to talk to people in Eugene I wouldn't ordinarily meet," said Yarris, "— to produce something that's beautiful and relaxing."

As the afternoon traffic rolls by outside its large windows, Savouré floats somewhere between here and Paris, its interior a mixture of warm aromas and soft chatter.

Cascades Lakes Highway. This season, the park will be offering snowboarders the 400-foot superpipe, which was built last year. According to the Mount Bachelor Web site, the pipe was built to Olympic specifications, and hosted the Chevy Trucks U.S. Snowboard Grand Prix, an Olympic qualifier for the 2002 Salt Lake City Winter Olympics.

Willamette Pass. Oregon's third-largest ski area, will host the fifth annual BroadSports Challenge series, which includes a national snowboarding qualifying competition.

Shirk and Hayden agreed that the best snowboarding spot in Oregon is Mount Hood Meadows. Located approximately 185 miles northeast of Eugene, Mount Hood has a wide range of terrain, including numerous table tops, rails and half pipes to make snowboarders salivate.

For those itching to hit the slopes, snowboarding season usually begins right after Thanksgiving but varies

minutes with a needle and thread, or even fabric glue and safety pins. With luck you end up with what you envisioned: a unique piece of clothing designed for you. Not only do you have the satisfaction of having made it yourself, you can be sure you won't see the same thing on anyone else.

All you need is a little bit of creativity and the guts to cut into your new old clothes. When the items in question cost little more than the gas it took to get you to the store in the first place, those guts are easy to come by.
