The University of Oregon Testing Office is an official ETS computer-based testing site. Testing is available year-round, Monday-Friday, 2 sessions a day. Appointments can be scheduled by calling 541.346.2772 or by visiting the Testing Office.

The Testing Office is located on the 2nd floor (Rm. 238) of the University Health and Counseling Center, 1590 E. 13th Ave., Eugene OR.

The period of greatest demand is usually Sept. through March, so it makes sense to plan ahead.

For more information visit the Testing Office web site at <http://www.uoregon.edu/~testing/>

"Somebody in Burns does not care about what you described," Torrey said of "The Deal."

University Spanish instructor Bryan Moore questioned Jarvis, to no avail, about the low pay many non-tenure employees receive and asked the chancellor what he would do to ensure better compensation.

College of Education Dean Marty Kaufman, speaking as a citizen and not as a faculty member, emphasized the need to change citizens' minds about the negative implication of taxes.

"Taxes are about letting us compete better," he said.

Measures

organizers were already considering whether to advocate the issue in the next election.

Ballot Measure 27, the genetic foods labeling act, had a similar fate with more than 70 percent rejecting the proposal. The measure would have required companies to label packages of genetically engineered food. Opponents of the measure spent millions campaigning against the act, which was seen by many as an initiative that could have had national repercussions.

Measure supporters said they were not deterred by the failure.

"I think the ultimate loss is not being able to be the best consumer that (people) can be," measure supporter and co-organizer Mel Bankoff said. "This is not the end — this is only the beginning. We're going to come back smarter, stronger and more proactive."

Lane County voters struck down all six measures, including initiatives to raise funds for a new jail intake center, build and renovate county parks and construct a new $30 million public health building.

Eugene voters passed seven measures, many of which altered the city charter and added house-keeping amendments. Local voters denied a measure to appoint an official city attorney and did not approve Ballot Measure 20-67, a city initiative that would have raised money for local schools during a four-year period.

"This would have been a breath of fresh air," 4-J School District Superintendent George Russell said. "We could have gotten through (next school year) with a minimal level of reductions."
