Allan Amundson and the Ducks played Texas in the 2000 Holiday Bowl, and Oregon could be headed back to San Diego if it finishes second in the Pac-10 this season.

Ducks bowl for postseason game

Oregon is aiming for the Rose or Holiday bowls, but could be headed to other bowls

It may only be the middle of November, but it's not too early to think about going bowling.

And that doesn't mean grabbing your eight-pound ball and throwing it down the lane.

That means thinking about the BCS and how college football is heating up in the race for who is the best, who will finish last and who deserves to be smelling roses.

If bowl games were held today, Oregon would be in the Insight Bowl against the No. 3 team of the Big East, which could be Virginia Tech or West Virginia.

"We just want to win out and go to the best bowl game we can," linebacker David Moretti said.

The Ducks sit in a tie for fourth in the Pacific-10 Conference with UCLA, at 3-2, and under Pac-10 bowl arrangements, the No. 4 team in the conference goes to the Insight

Bowl. Oregon wins the tie-breaker over the Bruins because the Ducks beat UCLA earlier this season.

Five teams will represent the Pac-10 in bowls this year. The Pac-10 Champion goes to the Rose Bowl on Jan. 1, unless that team is one of the top two in BCS standings. Then the team would play in the Tostitos Fiesta Bowl for the national championship.

The Pac-10's second team will go to the Pacific Life Holiday Bowl and face off against the No. 3 team of the Big 12. The third place team in the Pac-10 will face No. 5 of the Big Ten in the Wells Fargo Sun Bowl. The Pac-10's fifth-place team visits the City That Never Sleeps for the Sega Sports Las Vegas Bowl.

As for Oregon, every player would agree that the current standings don't reflect anything about what will happen in the end.

"Right now we are shooting for the top," senior wide receiver Keenan Howry said. "We are shooting for the Rose Bowl because that is what the Pac-10 champ does and that is what
