Golfers struggle on second day

The Ducks are 13th of 15 teams in the Las Vegas Showdown

The weather at the Anthem Country Club in Las Vegas improved Tuesday, but the Ducks failed to follow suit.

The Oregon women's golf team dropped into 13th place out of 15 teams at the Las Vegas Founders Women's Collegiate Showdown on Tuesday, after shooting its second-consecutive round of 325. The Ducks trail tournament leader New Mexico by 61 strokes.

Weather conditions improved from Monday, when a blustery wind kept every score over par and forced more than half of the 81 scores over 80 strokes.

"Scores obviously were lower as a reflection of the weather," Oregon head coach Shannon Rouillard said.

UNLV true freshman Sunny Oh is the tournament's individual leader. Oh tied for the best round of the day with a 2-under-par 70, putting her at 3-over 145. New Mexico sophomore Kailin Downs, who also fired a second-round 70, shares second place with junior teammate Kristi Larsen and Pepperdine's senior All-American, Lindsey Wright.

UNLV, which led after Monday's first round, is in second at 594, five strokes behind New Mexico. Pepperdine is in third at 602, followed by San Jose State at 617 and Brigham Young at 619.

"It's my hope to gain a little ground on a team or two ahead of us," Rouillard said. "We need to count four rounds in the 70s."

True freshman Therese Wenslow, who has set two Oregon records this fall, carded the Ducks' best score of the day with a 4-over 76, putting her in a tie for 21st at 155.

"Therese played an incredible round of golf," Rouillard said. "A 76 on this course is very commendable."

Sophomore Johnna Nealy was the only Duck other than Wenslow to shoot a round in the 70s Tuesday, as she carded a 7-over 79.

The tournament concludes Wednesday with the final 18 holes.

"Each time we count four scores in the 70s, we're an incredible team," Rouillard said. "We'll get another chance tomorrow."

Oregon

The Washington squads won their respective contests, and both said that their opponents' trash talking helped with motivation.

"That definitely got us hyped," Washington defensive back Nate Robinson told The Seattle Times about comments by an Oregon State player that the Beavers were going to push the Huskies "deeper into the mud."

"I'm still wiping the mud from my face," Washington receiver Reggie Williams told the Times.

In eastern Washington, the Cougars were ticked off by comments that may or may not have been made by Duck running back Onterrio Smith.

"Onterrio put a bull's-eye on himself," Washington State running back Jermaine Green told the Times. "He was talking a lot of talk to our defense, and it motivated our team to beat Oregon."

But Smith may not have even said anything disparaging about the Cougs. Free safety Keith Lewis, on the other hand, definitely did. In an interview with Seattle sports radio, Lewis said the Ducks had "played against better" quarterbacks than Jason Gesser, and that the Ducks "look at Washington State's field as ours."

The cast cast

It's that time of the season, where injuries start to take a toll on the players that head out on the field every Saturday.

Aaron Gipson was wandering the sidelines of Tuesday's practice in a boot on his left foot, Smith and Lewis were in street clothes and linebacker Garret Graham also wasn't practicing.

While all those players, other than Gipson, are listed as probable for this weekend's contest against Washington, the Ducks are definitely dinged.
