Oregon

What distinguishes the current season from the last three-loss campaign is the fact that Oregon has lost three of its last four games. In 1999, the Ducks lost two straight to Washington and UCLA, but surrounded those defeats with victories.

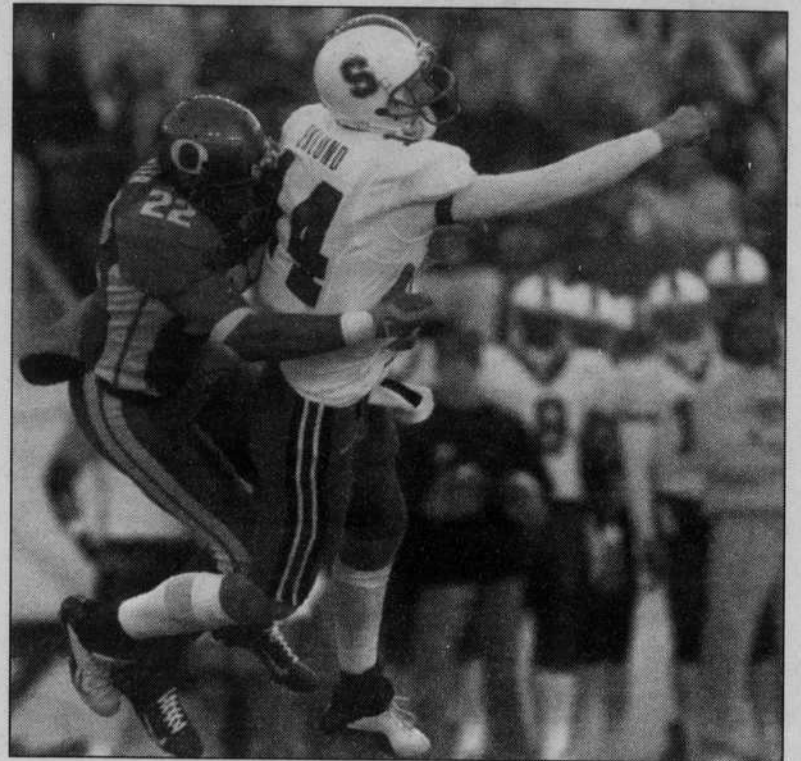

"I think you've just got to keep going."

This is new ground for Oregon. No player on the roster has had a period of losing like this. But it hasn't deterred them from looking forward to Washington.

"I just think you've got to keep going," Webster said. "Things don't go your way sometimes and you've just got to push through them. Those three games just didn't go our way. We just have to push through them, beat the Dawgs, then go down to Oregon State and win the bowl game."

As for Webster and Amundson, and the rest of the Duck seniors, it is important for them to stay away from their worst season — record-wise — since they've been at Oregon. "I believe they'll go out as the winningest program during their time in the Pac-10, and that's an awesome accomplishment, a tremendous thing to take with them their entire lives," Bellotti said.
