CODAC

Law, the Athletic Department, ethnic studies, the James H. Warshaw Sports Marketing Center, political science, University administration and student and community leadership. "We're trying to provide a space to consider these complex issues — economic, legal, political, social, etc. — in light of these campus community concerns on diversity at the University," Shuford said.

The panel discussion is a part of CODAC's effort to address the atmosphere of diversity and tolerance at the University, Shuford said. He added that Dr. Susan Rankin, former senior diversity planning analyst at Pennsylvania State University, released research findings on the campus climate that indicated many respondents felt the University did not do a satisfactory job of fostering diversity.

Based on the responses of 1,240 students, faculty and staff, the study found that 57 percent of those surveyed felt campus leadership did not visibly promote diversity. Likewise, the majority of the respondents felt that the classroom environment — 53 percent — and the work environment — 58 percent — "were not welcoming for people from under-represented groups."

Shuford said CODAC's purpose in sponsoring the panel discussion was not to assign blame or decide on a course of action, even though many previous events had done so.

"Our concern is to create the space for the dialogue to happen, rather than delineating what should or shouldn't happen," Shuford said.

Activities

Eugene sold out in two hours and about 500 people were turned away at the door. Tickets are $3 for the first 200 people and $5 after that. The Winter Dance Festival, by the Eugene Swing Dance Club, is on Dec. 14 from 5 to 10 p.m. also at Agate Hall. Tickets are $3 for students.

For New Year's fun, the Downtown Athletic Club will host ballroom, Latin and swing dancing on Dec. 31 as part of the annual First Night Eugene. The cost is $5 in advance and $7 at the door and includes access to other First Night events. For information, contact Laura Taylor, the event coordinator at 342-3058.

Eugene's own Satin Love Orchestra will also perform a 21-and-over New Year's Eve show at the McDonald Theatre. SLO is a 10-member disco/funk band with a huge local following. Tickets are $20 in advance and $25 at the door. For information, call 345-4442.

Students can also take some creative art lessons on campus. The EMU Craft Center will have classes on making stained glass ornaments, devore scarves, felted creatures, paper lanterns and more. Costs for classes are $24-$29. For dates and information, call 346-4361.

Shoppers can head to the Holiday Farmers Market, which resumes today and runs through Christmas Eve at the Lane County Fairgrounds auditorium. More than 35 local farms will be selling locally grown fruits and vegetables, jams and jellies, pastries and arts and crafts.

The Holiday Farmers Market "supports the local economy and local agriculture," Market Director Noa O'Hare said. "Students should come." For more information, call 431-4923.

The Lane County Ice Center is also at the fairgrounds and students can ice skate for less than $8.

For those who want to spend time outdoors, Mt. Pisgah and Spencer's Butte are great places to go hiking, because trails generally aren't as crowded during the break. For more information on Mt. Pisgah go to www.efn.org/~mtpisgah/.
