21 die as commuter plane crashes in N.C.

CHARLOTTE, N.C. — A US Airways commuter plane corkscrewed into the earth outside a hangar at Charlotte/Douglas International Airport on Wednesday, exploding in a fireball that killed all 21 aboard.

The plane, Flight 5481 bound for Greenville-Spartanburg, S.C., was full with 19 passengers and two pilots aboard when it crashed at 8:49 a.m. EDT, missing by less than 50 yards a US Airways maintenance base with hundreds of workers.

About 400 workers scrambled to safety from the cavernous hangar, avoiding a torrent of burning aviation fuel that surged from a storm drain like lava.

The cause of the crash was unknown, but authorities said there was a truncated conversation between the tower and the pilot after takeoff. Witnesses said the aircraft seemed to struggle from the start.

The flight data recorder and the cockpit voice recorder were recovered and will be examined Thursday.

North Korea condemns U.S.; Bush offers talks

SEOUL, South Korea — With the diplomatic ball in its court, North Korea stuck Wednesday to its long-held game plan of firing off bombastic rhetoric while pretending to ignore mounting international pressure to end its nuclear weapons programs.

Hours after the Bush administration shifted tactics Tuesday and formally agreed to talk with North Korea, the isolated communist country's official news agency released a vitriolic condemnation of the United States without acknowledging what South Korea's media heralded as a potential breakthrough in the standoff.

"The 'nuclear issue' that renders the situation on the Korean peninsula strained is a product of the U.S. strategy to dominate the world whereby it is working hard to bring a holocaust of a nuclear war to the Korean nation, calling for a pre-emptive nuclear strike after deploying lots of nuclear weapons in and around South Korea," said a commentary from the North Korean news agency.

GOP struggles for way to address race issues

WASHINGTON — As Republicans tried urgently to come up with a plan Wednesday to illustrate their commitment to civil rights, a furor over President George W. Bush's renomination of controversial Judge Charles Pickering to a federal appeals court ensured the task would be even more difficult.

Senate Republicans huddled inside the ornate Library of Congress during a daylong retreat in which they pledged to increase spending on historically black colleges and universities, assist educational institutions that serve Hispanics, aid small businesses and hold "leadership summits" with African-Americans, Hispanics and women.

Democrats and civil rights activists quickly derided the Republican proposals as woefully insufficient. Senate Majority Leader Bill Frist, R-Tenn., repeatedly dodged questions about whether he would support Pickering, who was rejected last year on a party-line vote by the Senate Judiciary Committee. Critics say Pickering, a federal judge in Mississippi, has a history of racial insensitivity.

Bill would ban human cloning for any reason

ORLANDO, Fla. — All human cloning would be banned under a bill introduced Wednesday in Congress, touching off a new debate over whether to halt potentially promising research into treatments for many diseases.

Nation & world briefing

The bill — sponsored in part by U.S. Rep. Dave Weldon, R-Fla. — would send people to jail and levy fines up to $1 million for human cloning endeavors, whether the intent is to make a baby or conduct research.

The total ban is expected to pass the U.S. House but stall in the Senate, where lawmakers oppose the technique for reproduction but remain divided over whether it could be used for research.

There are strong voices on both sides, setting up what is likely to be a pivotal debate on one of the newest and most controversial areas of medical experimentation.

Sharon investigation erodes Likud support

JERUSALEM — Reports that Israeli police were investigating Prime Minister Ariel Sharon's finances rattled his Likud Party on Wednesday and threatened to further whittle its lead in the polls over the Labor Party in the final weeks before national elections on Jan. 28.

Already battered by reports of vote-buying and criminal involvement in its primary elections last month, Likud appeared to be in danger of losing more ground following the latest disclosures.

The Ha'aretz newspaper reported on Tuesday that police were investigating suspicions that Sharon received $1.49 million from Cyril Kern, a businessman in South Africa, as security for a bank loan, but failed to disclose the transfer when questioned by police investigators, falsely claiming that the loan was obtained in return for the mortgage of his ranch.

The bank loan was used to repay improper contributions to Sharon's 1999 primary campaign.
