Angling's allure

Freezing temperatures and frosted ground greeted anglers Saturday morning around creeks, streams and rivers of the Oregon Coast Range. The prize catch, winter steelhead, were few and far between, but fishermen nonetheless enjoyed a day of brilliant sunshine. Fishing is expected to improve when temperatures rise and water levels recede, and anglers from around the state will certainly appreciate more clear weather.

Skateboarding

In their defense, Goulette and Groth said it actually isn't the skaters who take chunks out of campus pavement and brick — it's the BMX bikers who grind away.

"When bikes grind on ledges, it's much worse," Goulette said.

Groth even suggested "coping" — a metal edge — be attached to the damaged peripheries, much like at local skate parks.

But Leavitt, understanding of skaters' passion for the sport, said she still thinks the activity is more appropriate at designated off-campus locations.

"These different and specialized forms of recreation need specialized venues," Leavitt said, advocating the use of local skate parks.
