

Leading history Black History Month person of the day

Lorraine Vivian Hansberry was born May 19, 1930, in Chicago. Her parents were prominent in black cultural and political circles, which exposed her to arts and culture from an early age. She attended the University of Wisconsin but moved to New York City in 1950.

Hansberry was a reporter and associate editor for Freedom, a progressive black newspaper, from 1950 to 1953, when she quit to pursue a playwriting career. She shortly married Robert Nemiroff, a writer and graduate student at New York University. For the next three years, she worked odd jobs, studied African history with W.E.B. Du Bois and wrote. In 1957, she completed "A Raisin in the Sun," and it opened on Broadway in 1959.

The play was the first drama by a black woman to be produced on Broadway, and it earned her the New York Drama Critics Circle award for Best Play. She was the youngest person and the first black person to win the honor. The play had an all-black cast, except for one person, a black director and many black investors, which opened many possibilities for black people on Broadway.

Hansberry wrote the screenplay for a movie version of her play, which won her a Screenwriters Guild Award and a special award at the Cannes Film Festival in 1961. She died Jan. 12, 1965.

PFC

"Regardless of whatever your final decision is in terms of allocating their budget, I think (PFC) should commend the students for working with (PFC) on (its) budget."

Campus radio station KWVA 88.1 had two hearings Tuesday.

After PFC voted 4-3-0 to hear the appeal, KWVA launched into its appeal hearing.

"This funding is crucial," Charlotte Nisser, the general manager of KWVA, said in reference to the radio station's request for more money to be allocated for equipment repair.

PFC disagreed.

"I think the budget was increased a healthy amount," Martell said, referring to the 16.49 percent increase in funds PFC allocated KWVA during its first budget hearing.

PFC members agreed with Martell's statement, and voted against an increase 6-0-1.

The Japanese Students Organization walked away from its appeal with a $100 increase in food holding for Japan Night, which brought its new budget to $4,034.

Both Child Care Subsidy and Conflict Resolution Services did not budget for mandatory increases in pay. PFC allocated each group the desired funds, giving Child Care Subsidy $235,162 and Conflict Resolution Services $51,447. The Community Internship Program also asked for an increase in payroll and received $14,905.

Baha'i was tabled until Thursday because members failed to show up to the hearing.

fully licensed therapists, saying that interns are aware of their lack of experience, are under more supervision than the state requires and actively seek supervisors' input and advice.

Regular services are priced on a sliding scale according to income, ranging from $10 to $40 per session. However, a client will never be refused because of his or her inability to pay, and the center offers "therapy scholarships" to those who need them.
